

DIXON HIGH WINNERS CONFERENCE CHAMPIONSHIP

MITCHELL ON STAND TODAY; TELLS STORY

Relates Unsuccessful Recommendations Made to War Dept.

Washington, Nov. 23.—(AP)—Col. William Mitchell took the witness stand today before the court martial trying him for breach of discipline as a result of his public criticism of the administration of the army and navy air service.

For the third time within a few months the air crusader reported under oath his reasons for assailing those in charge of government aviation, and for his advocacy of a larger and better trained and equipped air force.

Much of his testimony hinged upon the same points he had stressed last spring before the house aircraft committee and later before the president's special air board.

Asks No Favors.

When he took the stand in his own behalf, he was informed of his rights by the law member of the court, Col. Winship, and replied he would subject himself to full direct and cross examination by the defense and prosecution counsel "the same as any other witness."

Col. Mitchell began his testimony with a long and detailed account of his army career, including the service in the air in France, for which he was awarded many decorations.

From that point, the witness was led under questioning by his counsel, Representative Frank Reid of Illinois, to an expression of his opinion on various phases of aircraft development. The Colonel testified that at the end of the World War aviation was just beginning to come into its own, and had the conflict gone on a destructive air warfare would have been directed against Germany's "nerve centers."

He then related a long succession of recommendations regarding aviation made by him and rejected by the war department. He said he never had been able to have a study made of the precautions a city like New York should take to defend itself from an air attack.

LOONEY TRIAL STARTS TODAY IN GALESBURG

Murder Case is Taken Up on Change of Venue Today

Galesburg, Ill., Nov. 23.—(AP)—Echoes of Rock Island's underworld war of three years ago sounded in Knox county circuit court this morning as the trial of John Looney, charged with the murder of William Gabel, saloonkeeper, got under way. The case was brought here on a change of venue from Rock Island county.

Judge Willis F. Graham of Warren county is presiding.

Selection of a jury was started the middle of the morning. Thirty names were on the list to be examined to-day. It is expected that a week or 10 days will be consumed in selection of a jury.

Attorney General Oscar Carlstrom appeared for the first time in the case this morning. Other prosecution attorneys present in court today were Charles Hadley, assistant attorney general; State's Attorney Ben S. Bell of Rock Island; State's Attorney R. C. Rice of Galesburg; and S. M. Mead, assistant state's attorney here.

O. O. Askren of Santa Fe, N. M., was a member of Looney's legal staff. John Daugherty and I. B. Wasson of Peoria and R. D. Robinson, of Galesburg, completed the list of attorneys for the defense.

The defendant was accompanied in court by his daughter, Mrs. Ursula Hamblin, who sat by his side at the trial opened.

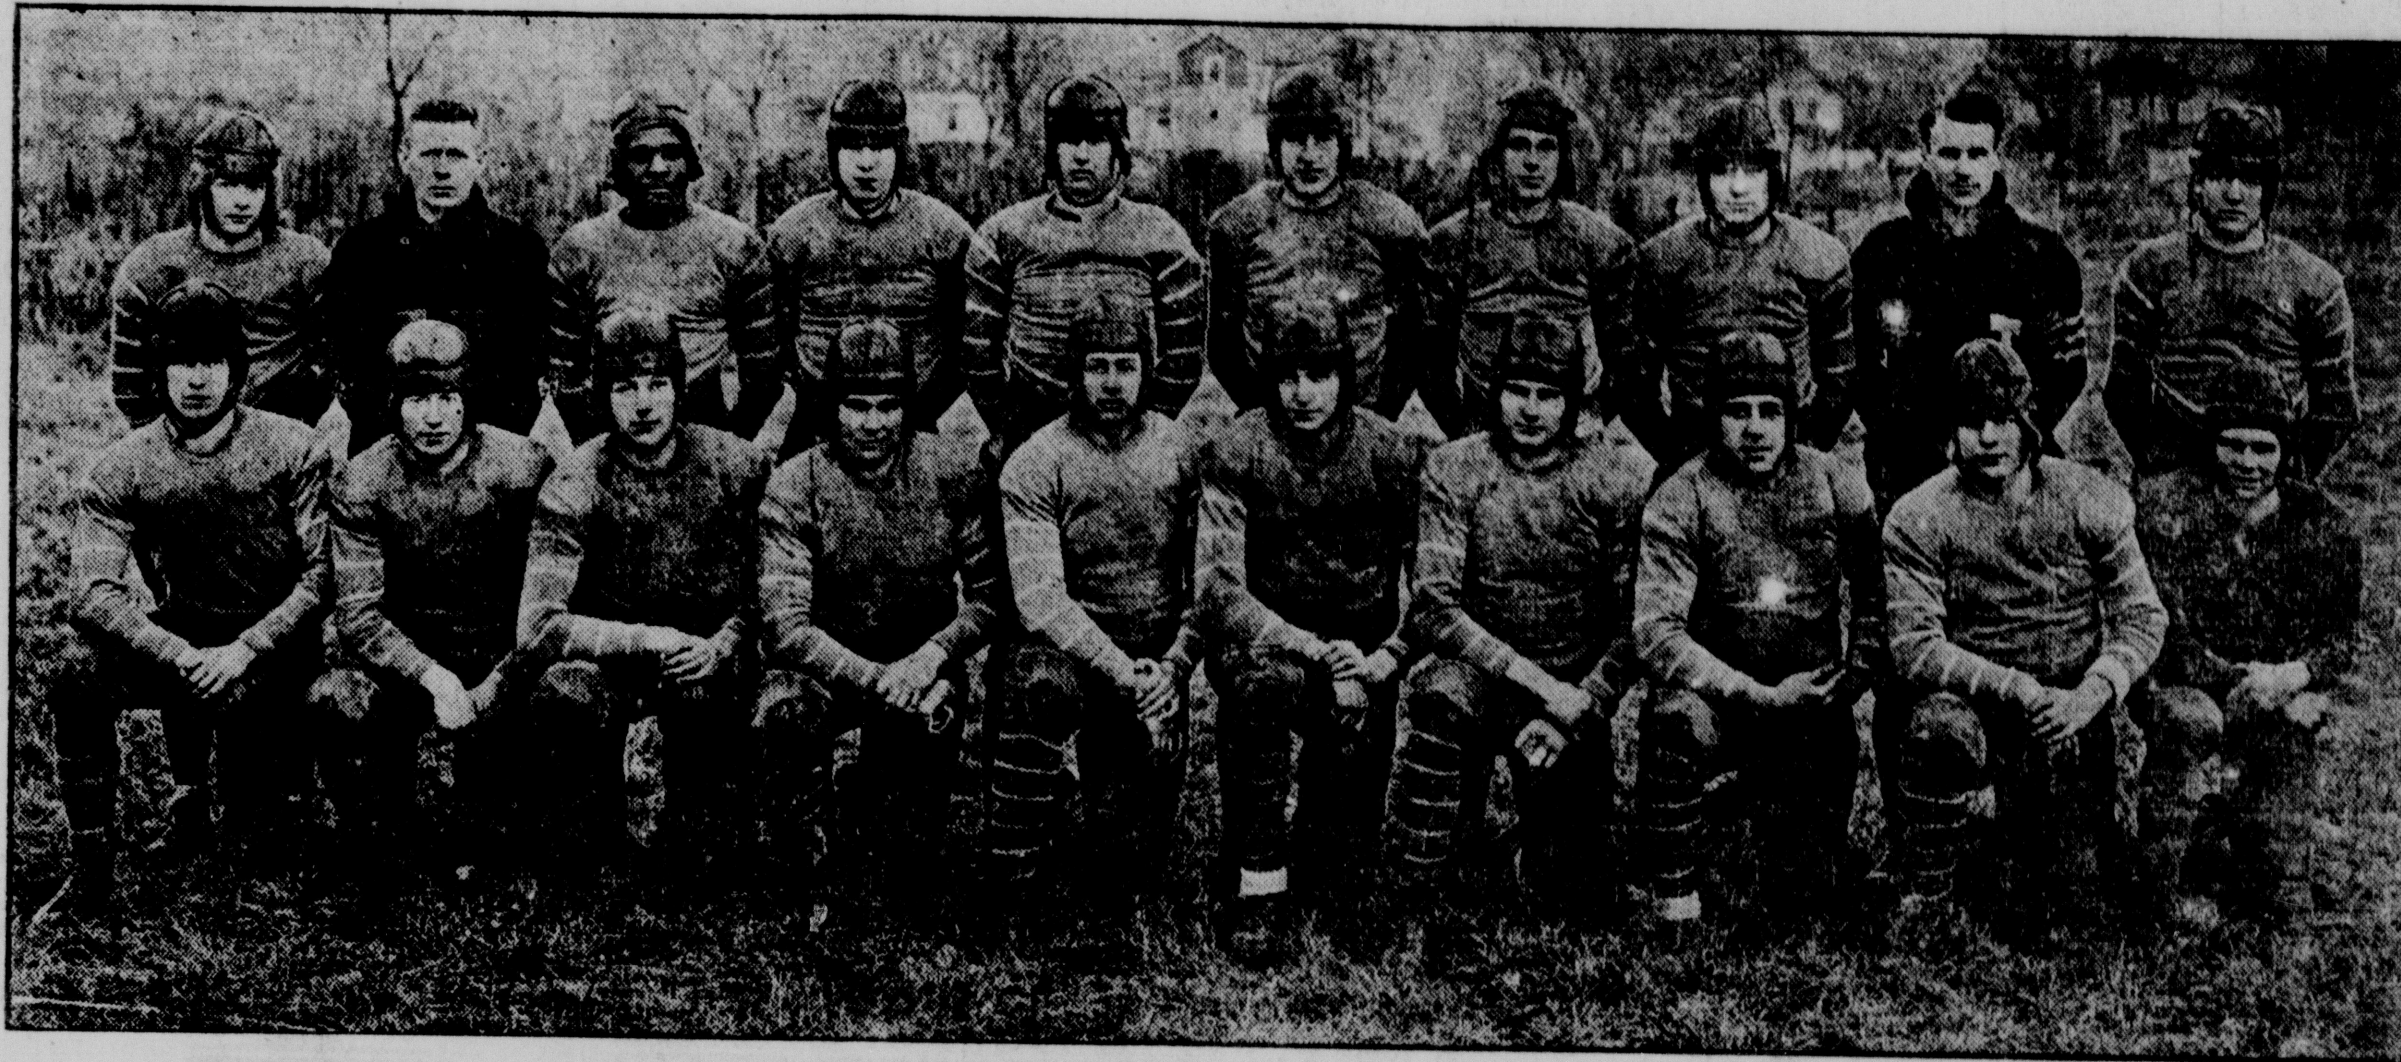

Italian Masons Will Reorganize All Lodges

Rome, Nov. 23.—(AP)—Dissolution of all Masonic lodges in Italy has been ordered by Domizio Torrigiani, Grand Master of Italian Free Masons. The Grand Orient Lodge will, however, continue to function as a Masonic organization in conformity with the new association law and new lodges will be created also conforming to the requirements of this law.

Springfield Attorney of Prominence Died Sunday

Springfield—James Riggs Orr, attorney and a member of the board of education, died here last night following an illness of eight months. He was also a member of the city election commission for several years.

DIXON HIGH SCHOOL FOOTBALL TEAM—CONFERENCE CHAMPIONS

The Dixon high school ball team cinched the championship of the Rock River Valley Conference Saturday afternoon, when it defeated Mt. Morris High, 27 to 0. The team's Thanksgiving Day, was the only team to score on Dixon during the season.

Upper row—Kinney, Line Coach B. O. Cully, Reagan, G. McNicol, Kennedy, R. McNicol, McReynolds, Coach A. C. Bowers, Segner.

Lower Row—Stanley, Marks, Bondi (Capt.), Kerst, Wienman, Keller, Miller, Johnson, Coss, O'Malley.

FINGER PRINTS OF THIEF MADE BY GLOVED HAND

No Clue to Sterling Robbers Found by Officials

Sterling—No trace has been found of the robbers who broke the plate glass window of the Wynne-Deaver Dry Goods company at an early hour Friday morning and made away with six valuable fur coats.

Two strangers were seen looking into the window late in the evening and the same two men were seen looking over other windows, but whether or not they were the two men who did the job is not known, and no definite description was secured of the two men in question.

The disposal of six fur coats is not a very hard task for robbers, as there is a ready sale of these coats in large cities, where persons make a business of buying stolen property.

Deputy Sheriff J. W. Kelly, who took photographs of the prints on the window, found upon developing the pictures that a leather glove was worn by the party leaving the prints. It is believed that the man who broke the window, placed his hand against the glass above the break to steady it when he struck the blow.

AVIATION CHIEF OF SHENANDOAH ON STAND AGAIN

Admits He Withheld Important Testimony From the Court

Washington, Nov. 23.—(AP)—Arthur E. Carlson, aviation chief trigger of the wrecked Shenandoah, told the Shenandoah naval court today that one of the surviving officers of the airship, Lieut. Bauch, had told him not to give certain information to the court unless it was asked for specifically.

This information, which Carlson withheld when he first testified at Lakehurst, was that 15 minutes before the Shenandoah broke up, he had closed off at midship the internal gassing manifold connecting the 18 helium gas cells and designed to permit equalization of the gas in the individual cells.

On Own Initiative.

Carlson testified that he stopped up the manifold on his own initiative, because helium was rushing to the after cells and the ship already was up by the stern.

Asked why he had not given the court this information before, he said he did not regard it as "material to the inquiry."

Carlson said he told Lieut. Bauch about it the night of the wreck. "What did he say to you?" he was asked.

"He said 'If they don't question you on that subject, don't mention it.' He no doubt had the same opinion that I did, that it was immaterial."

The witness said he also spoke to Lieut. Mayer, another survivor, who replied that "he did not know anything about it that it was up to me."

Christian Says Farmers Need Help

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 23.—(AP)—The millions of people residing in the inland states and who raise 75 percent of the nation's wheat and 65 percent of its corn, will not much longer submit to the handicap of being economically isolated, Governor Theodore C. Thompson of Minnesota said at a meeting of the Mississippi Valley Association here today.

The governor gave a history of transportation in the country and told of the cheaper transportation facilities by water as compared with railroads.

Although not favoring any particular water course, the governor was emphatic in his statement that the inland states, in order to grow industrially must be linked with the seaports of the eastern coast.

Trunk Murder Suspect Not Guilty: Is Freed

Chicago—Arrested as a suspect in Detroit's five-year-old trunk murder mystery, Paul Ward, waiter, was released when finger prints showed he was not the much wanted Eugene Leroy.

LEGISLATORS IN CONFERENCE ON FERGUS' ACTION

Plan Defense in Suit to Compel Redistricting State.

Springfield, Ill., Nov. 23.—(AP)—Fifty state representatives and five senators went into a joint executive session at noon today to determine what answer to make to the Fergus suit in the supreme court. Roger Little of Champaign was named chairman and Arthur Roe of Vandalia, secretary.

Down state legislators have all been served with summons requiring them to answer by Dec. 1st, why they have failed to comply with the constitutional provisions, requiring redistricting of the state.

Five senators, including Mrs. Florence Bohrer, of Bloomington, the only woman in the conference, met in a senate committee room and discussed probable action separately, when a request that they join the house members was received. At that time the senators had done nothing definite.

There were at least two proposals before the representatives, one was that a committee of members draw up a demurrer to the Fergus suit, setting forth the plea that the supreme court is without power to compel any action by the legislative branch of the state government.

There is an opinion of the supreme court to that effect, handed down years ago.

The other proposal was to ask the attorney general to handle the case for them.

A recess until 3 o'clock was taken by the joint conference shortly after 1 o'clock. At that time a committee will propose a plan of action. Committee members include the chairman and secretary, Speaker Robert Scholes of Peoria, John P. Devine, Dixon; Thomas L. Fekete, East St. Louis, all members of the house; and Senator Jesse L. Deck, Decatur and Senator E. B. Searcy, Springfield.

Senator Short is For World Court

Chicago, Nov. 23.—(AP)—On the way to Washington Senator S. M. Shortridge of California, member of the Senate finance committee, paused here long enough to declared that the voters of California are "unanimously opposed to the League of Nations."

"But we can and should give our adherence to the world court with the reservations favored by the President," he said.

Prediction also was made that taxes be cut about $300,000,000 including substantial reductions in hip, surtaxes and federal inheritance taxes.

Two Saved from Drowning Under Overturned Auto

Chicago—Two passing football players saved two men from drowning in water underneath an overturned automobile. Earl Seip, driver of the car, was dead.

Transplants Bone From Dead Woman to Leg of His Patient

Leningrad, Russia, Nov. 23.—(AP)—Professor Opell of Leningrad announced today before a conference of physicians and surgeons that he had successfully transplanted a bone from a dead body to a woman patient suffering from tuberculosis of the knee joint which prevented her from walking.

After the operation the woman in a short time was able to walk about freely.

The surgeon also said that he performed a similar operation on a woman suffering from sarcoma of the femur.

SMALL SEEKING GOVERNMENT AID IN T. B. CAMPAIGN

Sees Coolidge and Asks Help in Eradication of Tuberculosis

Washington, Nov. 23.—(AP)—An appeal for an increased federal appropriation for eradication of tuberculosis among cattle was made to President Coolidge and the Department of Agriculture today by Gov. Small of Illinois and a delegation of state officials.

While no specific increase in federal appropriations was requested to promote cooperative testing and indemnification of cattle owners whose cows are destroyed, the Governor said he hoped the government would bear half the expense, matching the state dollar for dollar, or at least contributing half of the state's outlay.

The visit to the White House afforded Governor Small his first opportunity to meet Mr. Coolidge since he became President. In addition to discussing the cattle situation, the Governor outlined what Illinois was doing toward the development of the Great Lakes to Gulf Waterway and urged federal cooperation in the work.

Sunday Blue Laws in New Jersey Attacked

Perth Amboy, N. J., Nov. 23.—(AP)—The names of hundreds of Middlesex county residents have been taken by police in the second crusade of the month against violators of the vice and immorality act, New Jersey's old Sunday blue laws. Many were "second offenders."

The offenses include driving an automobile, selling newspapers, riding on trolley cars, buying food or drink of any kind and all forms of amusement, such as attending the theater or playing games. The names will be presented to the grand jury. Two weeks ago, 3,711 names were recorded.

Efforts of the law enforcement league to have theaters closed on Sundays are said to be responsible for the effort to have the blue law abrogated.

Clark Cah'll Injured While Playing Football

Clark, the eleven-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Cahill, suffered fractures of the collar bone and shoulder blade while playing football with companions Saturday.

The young player collided with a tree, while making an end run, the broken bones resulting. He is resting well today.

FORGER'S CHECKS REDEEMED; DOESN'T KNOW WHO DID IT

Milwaukee Court Finds Unusual Case; Orders Man to "Beat It"

Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 23.—(AP)—A mystery man left the city last night leaving an unusual chapter in its police history.

Charged with forgery under the name of Peter Daly, 60, from "nowhere" he vanished under orders of Judge Shaughenessy of Municipal Court after the latter had given him a suspended sentence.

Revelations by police and his own admission were that Daly had cashed hundreds of worthless checks in many cities, but never once has his intended victim been lost by the transaction.

From some mysterious source every check had been made good until the total has reached a tidy fortune.

Daly declared that he does not know who is picking up his worthless paper or why. He only knows, he said, that private detectives have trailed him constantly for years, never molesting him, but keeping him under surveillance and paying the bad checks as fast as he passed them.

Daly acted as his own attorney during his trial here and astonished court attendants with his knowledge of procedure, his faultless English and refined manner. Judge Shaughenessy took the case under advisement, and although finding Daly guilty, suspended his sentence with the provision that he leave the city.

The true name of the man who wrote the worthless checks with one hand and indorsed them with the other. The writing was in no way similar and would not be thought to have been written by the same person.

Three Women Wanted for Thefts in Many Cities

Quincy, Ill., Nov. 23.—(AP)—With additional charges coming in daily against the three women held in jail here in connection with a $4,000 fur robbery here last Thursday, local police believe they have rounded up a gang of crooks, whose operations represented all parts of the United States.

They are wanted in Ames, Iowa; Moline, Illinois; Lincoln, Neb.; Sioux City, Davenport and Des Moines, Ia.; St. Joseph, Mo., and many other places and have been identified by some officials of these towns.

The trio, it is believed, will be unable to furnish bonds.

NO AID WANTED SUICIDE CRIED, AS HE DROWNED

Asked That Ottawa Woman be Notified; Unknown Here

Detroit, Nov. 23.—(AP)—With a life preserver and two chairs within easy reach, a man who leaped into the Detroit river at the foot of Woodward Ave., early today sank and was drowned in 20 feet of water.

"No help wanted," he shouted as two policemen prepared to leap into the river after him.

The man apparently was a good swimmer, for he swam easily out into the river, and then sank despite the means of saving himself close at hand.

A note pinned to his cap, which he tossed on the dock as he leaped into the water, read: "Please notify Mrs. J. P. Cattlin, Ottawa, Ill."

NOT KNOWN IN OTTAWA

Ottawa, Ill., Nov. 23.—(AP)—No person by the name of Mrs. J. P. Cattlin could be found here today to shed light on the suicide note left in Detroit this morning. A Mrs. James P. Cattlin, however, a resident of Ottawa declares she knew of no one who would address such a note to her, as her husband and family are all in Ottawa.

Four Bombings in Chicago Yesterday

Chicago, Nov. 23.—(AP)—Gangland left a record of four bombings on the police records over Sunday.

Two of the outrages were directed against the homes of policemen who had been active in prohibition law enforcement. Revengeful bootleggers whose places had been raided, were believed responsible.

Mrs. Sophie Starcek was possibly fatally injured in another explosion which wrecked a south side cinder shop. The fourth bombing, at a tire shop was attributed to labor troubles.

Spring Valley Given Trimming in Clinton

The Spring Valley Wild Cat football team passed through Dixon Sunday morning on their way to Clinton where yesterday afternoon they met the Legion team of the Iowa city.

The Cats, who will oppose the Dixon Legion here next Sunday, were defeated by a score of 7 to 3 at Clinton.

DEFEATED MT. MORRIS HIGH ON SATURDAY

Team's Goal Line Was Not Crossed During the Season

The Dixon high school squad cinched the claim on the 1925 championship of the Rock River Valley conference Saturday afternoon at Mt. Morris when they romped away with a 27 to 0 victory against a two-man team. Some of the first string men were permitted to be in the game long enough to warm up and then Coach Bowers used his substitutes sparingly.

"Wink" McReynolds woke up the fans in the first 70 seconds of play when his interference formed a flying wedge, moving down the Mt. Morris line and backfield, and he raced 85 yards down the field carrying the oval for the first touchdown. He went back to try to kick the goal but failed.

Thus closed one of the most successful years in high school football known in Dixon for many years. The record the squad has established, making 166 points to the opposition's 2 and never permitting their goal line to be crossed, is one of which all may feel proud. Credit for the team that has been turned out of the school this year is due both to the players and to coaches A. C. Bowers and B. O. Cully.

The Mt. Morris game was a good conditioner for Thursday's final post-season contest with Sterling at Clinton north side field. Albers and Johnson were the two strong men who played good ball for Mt. Morris but were depended upon for all gains and were completely tired out. The crowd that witnessed the contest consisted of two-thirds from Dixon.

First Quarter.

Dixon kicked off to Mt. Morris, G. McNicol booted the oval to the 33 yard line. Dixon was penalized five yards for off sides on the first down. Mt. Morris could not penetrate through the Dixon line and punted on the fourth down to Dixon's 20 yard line. On the first snap of the ball, the Dixon line formed the "flying wedge" for McReynolds who tore through and raced unopposed 85 yards for the touchdown which came one minute and ten seconds after the game started. McReynolds failed to kick the goal.

Dixon kicked again to Mt. Morris, 30 yard line. Yoder was carried back for a five yard loss on a bad pass from center. The loss was gained back when Dixon was penalized five yards for off sides. Alter snapped a short pass to Rittenhouse which was good for three yards. Another attempted pass was blocked and on the fourth down Alter booted the ball to Dixon's 35 yard line. McReynolds hit the left end of the line for nine yards and O'Malley smashed through center for two more. McReynolds made another yard and left guard and then advanced 12 more around left end. "Wink" snapped a pass to G. McNicol which was good for 15 yards. G. McNicol made five through center and McReynolds hit the same place for one more and then advanced two and a half around left end. Dick McNicol smashed through the center of the line for two more and then O'Malley carried the ball around right end for the second touchdown of the afternoon. McReynolds kicking the goal. Dixon, 13, Mt. Morris, 0.

Steam Roller Worked.

The steam roller was telling strongly on the Mt. Morris line which was battered hard. G. McNicol kicked to Mt. Morris 20 yard line, the ball being returned 10 yards. After made, two yards through left tackle and then Mr. Morris stopped, unable to gain. Alter booted the ball to Dixon's 15 yard line and D. McNicol returned it 15 yards. O'Malley hit left tackle for two yards, and G. McNicol followed him for eight more in the same spot. McReynolds hit center for a five yard advance and O'Malley chose left tackle for two more. McReynolds hit left tackle for two yards and G. McNicol went through center for two. O'Malley lost five on an attempted end run. McReynolds making up the loss with a yard to the good on a sprint around left end on the next play. On the fourth down G. McNicol punted to Mt. Morris ten yard line. A forward pass, Alter to Johnson was good for a yard. McReynolds intercepted the next attempt and was downed on Mt. Morris 18 yard line. A five yard penalty was called for off-side against Dixon. McReynolds tried to pass to G. McNicol but the ball was knocked down and the quarter closed with the ball at Mt. Morris' possession on their own 40 yard line.

Second Quarter.

McReynolds grabbed one of Alter's passes out of the air in the center of the field and the ball belonged to Dixon on Mt. Morris 40 yard line.

Church

THE FIRST METHODIST CHURCH
Albert W. Carlson, Minister.
210 Pearl Ave.
The morning service: the fine attendance filled the entire auditorium and Sunday school room. There was but a place or two in the very front rows. The choir rendered a fine anthem which was appreciatively received by the people. Miss Standall and Miss Shawger sang a duet immediately preceding the sermon by Rev. Albert W. Carlson, the pastor. His topic was "Christ in You." He emphasized the dignity of life saying that anything which a King would stop to consider, and find of great interest and value was surely worthy of our consideration. The Pearl of Great Price which was found in the field by the seeker for the kingdom of God was purchased by the entire wealth of the buyer. This pearl was humanity. Such men as Peter and James and John and you and me in when Jesus saw such unthought of possibilities he changed us from the kind which might not be at all dependable to characters upon which he would build the coming civilization and the kingdom, and the church, and nothing, however powerful would ever, not even the gates of hell, should prevail against such a great and strong character as would be built in the life of men. It was the transforming power of God who would build such a conquering character in the faltering souls of men. With his power he had made us "To feel the want and need of life, such as the poor in spirit, the pure in heart, the vision is not dimmed by sin, wrong or prejudice, their God lives so close to them He can be seen. And so when he has done this He gives to us, who have Christ in us the exalted calling equal to himself. For as "My Father has sent me into the world, so send I you." He was the light of the world. But to us he said "Ye are the light of the world," and so conspicuous is our light as Christians that "It can not be hid." This exalted like becomes the preserving power of the world, the very "salt of the earth." Such characters are built upon the transforming grace of God through Christ, and such constitute the church. This institution through its powerful influence has kept the world from destruction and will continually permeate until we shall eventually find "every knee shall bow, and every tongue confess Jesus Christ as Lord." The question calls for an answer: "Am I such a character that represents this element in life? Is the incarnation of Jesus a fact in me?"

Three Baptisms.
At the morning service three children were formally dedicated to God by baptism: John Kilburn Hunt, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold V. Hunt; Lee Austin Craig, Jr., infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Austin Craig; and Patricia Lou Welas, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Welas.

The fine evening service was full of good cheer and happiness. The big sing was bigger than ever. There was organ, piano and orchestra accompaniment to help the singing. The fine singing leaves with you a thrill that stays. The Young Peoples Chorus was the biggest ever and sang beautifully. The interpretation of Ibsen's Peer Gynt was given by Rev. Carlson.
The audience was large and enthusiastic and were left with the thought of keeping life as far above the common and ordinary as possible.

Man Out on Bond is Rearrested Sunday
Dale ("Buck") Lambert was arrested Sunday afternoon at the Brown Field by Chief Deputy William Rose. This morning he was taken into the county court on an information charging transportation and possession of intoxicating liquor and his bonds fixed at $1000 which he was unable to furnish. Lambert was out on bonds on a charge of driving on automobile while in an intoxicated condition, the case being set for trial at this term of the county court.
Deputies from the sheriff's office were called to Nelson Sunday night and took in custody an aged man who was found lying in front of Young's garage in a highly intoxicated condition. A party of a bottle of alcohol was found in one of his pockets. He is slowly recovering from the effects at the county jail.

THE FOREST MAID—
O fairest of the rural maids!
Thy birth was in the forest shades;
And all the beauty of the place
Is in thy heart and on thy face.

The twilight of the trees and rocks
Is in the light shade of thy locks;
Thy step is as the wind that weaves
Its playful way among the leaves.

Thine eyes are springs, in whose serene
And silent waters heaven is seen;
Their lashes are the herbs that look
On their young figures in the brook.

The forest depths by foot impressed
Are not more silent than thy breast;
The holy place that fills the air
Of these calm solitudes is there.

—William Cullen Bryant.

W. C. T. U. Meeting Held Friday

The monthly meeting of the W. C. T. U. was held at the home of Mrs. Emma Geisler Friday afternoon. The meeting opened at 2:30 with the members singing "The white ribbon Rally song," with Mrs. Archie Klein at the piano.

Mrs. Emma Leivan led the devotionals, reading from the 6th chapter of Ephesians from the 10th to the 20th verses. Several led in short prayers. The salute to the flag was given by the members.

The secretary's report was read and accepted; also the treasurer's report read and accepted, followed by the singing of another number by the members, "The Flight Is On."

Mrs. Belle Morris was asked to send for the state reports for those wishing them.

Mrs. George Carpenter then read a report from the Great Lakes Hospital in regards to the work there—this being our soldiers and sailors meeting of the year.

The members were very glad to have with them at this meeting Rev. and Mrs. Albert Carlson, who were gladly welcomed to our union by the president, Mrs. Alice Missman. Rev. Carlson giving a very helpful and most interesting talk on the Maywood Hospital, making all those who were fortunate enough to hear it wish they could visit the boys helped so much there; see the fine buildings, and be glad for those unfortunate who are helped so much by care in the government hospital. Many questions were asked and answered by Rev. Carlson in regard to the hospital.

Mrs. Martha Shippert gave one of her very pleasing readings, entitled, "Old Glory Who Named You?" We are always glad to have her with us.

Rev. and Mrs. Carlson favored with a duet, "In the Garden," which was beautifully rendered and so much enjoyed by those present.

Miss Ruth Keyes favored with a very pretty piano selection, "The Butterfly" by Calixa Lavallee, and we hope to have her with us again.

The meeting closed with the mizpah benediction.

The December meeting will be held with Mrs. Fred Hobbs.

Mr. and Mrs. William Feltes entertained at dinner Sunday honoring the birthday anniversary of Mrs. Anna E. Feltes, mother of Mr. Feltes. After the delicious dinner a pleasant day was spent, all present wishing Mrs. Feltes many happy returns of the occasion.

MOTORED TO SHEFFIELD, ILL.,

SUNDAY—

Mr. and Mrs. Claude Harrington and Mr. and Mrs. Robert DePuy and daughters, Marietta and Frances, motored to Sheffield, Ill., Sunday and dined with Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Hennings.

MR. AND MRS. DUIS

ENTERTAINED—

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Duis entertained at dinner Mr. and Mrs. O. L. Shumard of Toledo, Ohio, who visited Dixon friends after attending a convention of the Sandusky Cement companies at the Drake Hotel, Chicago.

Entertained Lee County War Mothers

The members of the Lee County Chapter of American War Mothers were most royally entertained by the members of the Veterans of the Foreign War Post, and their Auxiliary, in Union Hall Tuesday evening, Nov. 17th.

Mrs. Strub acted as chairman in absence of the auxiliary president, Mrs. Lucy Roshbrook, who is quite ill. L. W. Miller, County Superintendent of Schools, the speaker of the evening, gave a most inspiring talk, paying tribute to the great men of our country, as well as to the ex-service men and to the mothers of the U. S. A.

Major Cushing in a few well worded remarks also paid tribute to mothers of all men who have fought for our great country.

Members of the Post extended a welcome to the War Mothers chapter and the mothers present expressed their personal appreciation of the very happy occasion. As a closing number, Miss Coakley rendered a beautiful piano solo.

Delicious refreshments were served by the ladies of the auxiliary and all enjoyed the evening and expressed a hope that they might again meet together in the near future.

HEROIC TELEPHONE

Two more telephone girls risked their lives in an effort to save a man from death. They tried to climb a burning, stairway in a storehouse in White Plains to warn a sleeping workman. In the meantime other "hello" girls remained at their post in the smoke-filled telephone building adjoining.

We are inclined to forget these little items of heroism when we get a wrong number, but the fact remains that there are few girls more loyal and conscientious than telephone operators. Alert and keen, they are at their switchboards all over the land day and night. They feel their responsibility, and without their constant service in our modern existence, business would practically stop, newspapers would have to go back to one edition a day and the whole country would suffer.

Don't snap at the "hello" girl when you get a wrong number. In our business life we couldn't get along without her.

Thursday Reading Circle Meeting

The Thursday Reading Circle met Friday afternoon at the home of Misses Ada and Bess Decker.

The meeting opened with Roll Call, each member answering with a Current Event.

Following this Miss Mary Hintz and Mrs. Charles Bishop gave an instrumental duet.

Mrs. Clara Bunnell read a fine paper on Oyster Bay, the Home of Theodore Roosevelt.

The program closed with several musical selections by Miss Hintz and Mrs. Bishop.

After the program the hostesses served a delicious luncheon.

MRS. GOODSELL PRESENTED WITH FLOWERS—

Mrs. E. M. Goodsell, reader of the choir of St. Paul's Lutheran church was happily surprised Thursday evening after choir practice when the members of the choir presented her with a beautiful bouquet of chrysanthemums. The courtesy honored the anniversary of Mrs. Goodsell's leadership of the choir. Quite an event was made of the anniversary and a pleasant evening with the serving of refreshments followed. Mrs. Goodsell's work with the choir is very successful and much appreciated.

SPECIAL REHEARSAL

JUNIOR CHOIR—
There will be a special rehearsal of the Junior choir of the St. Paul's Lutheran church this evening at 7 o'clock. All members are requested to be present.

WILL GIVE LUNCHEON

WEDNESDAY—
Mrs. Fred Dimick will entertain on Wednesday with a luncheon for Miss Margaret Forrest of St. Paul, and Miss Nettie Dimick of Waterloo, Iowa.

Thanksgiving Menus Planned in Sister Mary's Kitchen

BY SISTER MARY

The spirit of the first Thanksgiving Day on the shores of New England should not be forgotten. It is a solemn as well as a joyous feast and savors of patriotism as our other feast days do not. Every family has its traditions sacred to the day—let each member perpetuate them.

While simplicity should be the keynote of the dinner, every housewife likes to feel that she has made a careful choice from the best of the markets and her pocketbook afford and she offers her feast often with much sacrifice and always with careful planning and consideration.

Simple table decorations, simple service and simple menu best preserve the homeliness of the feast.

A basket of fruit and nuts with trailing vines makes an ideal centerpiece and at the same time furnishes a seasonable last course for the dinner.

Here Are Two Menus

Turkey is always associated with Thanksgiving, but since the Great American Bird is said to be scarce and high in price this year some of us may decide to be thankful without turkey this year so here are two menus, one with and one without.

Oyster Cocktail
Celery Pickles Olives
Roast Turkey Giblet Stuffing
Mashed Potatoes Creamed Onions
Cranberry Jelly
Stuffed Pepper Salad
Brown Bread Sandwiches
Pumpkin Pie

Orange Ice
Nuts Coffee Grapes
And the Thanksgiving dinner with turkey might be something like this:

Tomato Bouillon
Fresh Ham Stuffed and Baked
Brushing Apples
Sweet Potatoes de Lux
Creamed Dried Corn
Stuffed Celery
Home-Made Pickles
Strawberry Preserves
Hot Rolls

Milk Mince Pie
Nuts Coffee Ginger Ice
Fruit

Select Good Turkey

Of course the turkey's the thing in the first menu so since we're going to serve the patriotic bird even if we must live on bread and water for a month afterwards, let's be sure that we select the best available.

When you are choosing your turkey look for these conditions. The flesh must be firm and plump.

The cartilage at the end of the breast bone must be soft and pliable. The "drum sticks" should be smooth with a dark tinge. The bird should weigh about ten pounds. And if the skin is white and the breast is broad and plump take him for your own.

The butcher should dress the turkey, cleaning the giblets (heart, liver and gizzard) and putting them loosely back inside the body.

If he has failed to singe the bird hold it over the gas flame and quickly burn off the hairs.

Wash Fowl Thoroughly
Put giblets in cold salt water to cover while washing the turkey. Scrub the flesh well in tepid water using a small, not too stiff brush. Rub the inside well with salt and then let cold water wash out every trace of salt. Wash the outside through many waters scrubbing well with the palm of the hand and taking care not to break the skin. When thoroughly clean wipe dry with a soft piece of cheesecloth.

The turkey is now ready to stuff when wanted, but the cleaning should be done the day before Thanksgiving and the bird kept on ice until needed.

The trussing of the turkey is impossible will appear on the platter.

After stuffing draw the thighs close to the body and tie with a strong cord. Draw wings down and close to the body. Use a large trussing needle and sew through one wing. Draw the cord through the body and make a half-inch stitch in the other wing, taking the cord back to first wing and tying firmly. When the turkey is ready to be served cut the knot and draw out the cord and cut the cord from the legs.

Steam Before Roasting
If you would have your turkey tender and not too dry steam it for one or two hours before roasting.

This insures a tender, moist meat that reaches perfection. Save the "drippings" from the turkey while steaming to use for basting while roasting.

After the turkey has been steamed rub it well with salt and cover breast with one-third cup butter and one-fourth cup flour rubbed together. Place on its side in the roasting pan and put into a hot oven. As soon as the turkey begins to brown reduce heat, fill bottom of pan with liquor in which turkey was steamed and roast two hours for a ten-pound turkey. If a self-basting roaster is used basting is unnecessary, otherwise baste every ten or fifteen minutes. Turn often to insure an even brown.

The giblets are cooked until tender in boiling water to cover and then finely chopped. They may be added to plain bread stuffing or combined with rice to make the stuffing. The stock from the giblets is used to cook the rice.

Do not stuff a turkey too full for the stuffing swells during roasting and may burst the bird if the skin is tightly sewn. Fill neck cavity first, then the body cavity.

When you steam the turkey tie the legs to the steamer top. This lets the juices run down into the breast.

Piece de Resistance

The piece de resistance for the turkeyless dinner is a fresh ham, boned and stuffed. The butcher will bone the cut so the preparation of this dinner is less work than that of the turkey dinner.

The dishes suggested are inexpensive, but delicious and apropos with pork. The cost of the entire dinner is appreciably less than that of the turkey dinner disregarding the turkey.

A chestnut stuffing or plain bread stuffing is particularly good with pork. As the stuffing for both turkeys and hams are fundamentally the same the foundation recipe is given. For turkey do the ingredients.

Plain Bread Stuffing

Four cups coarse bread crumbs, 1 cup boiling water, 1 egg, 1-2 cup melted butter, 1 small onion, 1 tablespoon minced parsley, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon celery salt, 1-4 teaspoon pepper, 1-4 teaspoon powdered sage (optional).

Bread two days old should be used. Put crumbs into mixing bowl, pour boiling water over them, cover and let stand half an hour. Take up a handful of crumbs and carefully squeeze out all excess moisture. The crumbs should be light and slightly moist. Beat egg until light and add to crumbs with a fork to mix well. Stir lightly with a fork to mix well. Mince onion and add with parsley to bread mixture. Add seasoning and mix lightly but thoroughly. The stuffing is ready to add the minced giblets or finely chopped chestnuts.

If giblets are added use giblet stock instead of water to moisten crumbs.

If chestnuts are added omit onion and use half as much parsley.

Many persons dislike the taste of sage in a stuffing so it is well to be sure of the tastes of the guests before using this seasoning.

Advices President Not to Compromise on the World Court

Washington, Nov. 21.—(AP)—President Coolidge was advised today by Senator Lenroot, republican, Wis., not to compromise with enemies of the world court in the senate.

There is no necessity, the senator said, for accepting reservations or amendments that will be distasteful to the administration.

He predicted that a form of ratification patterned after the Harding-Hughes proposal would muster 75 votes, or about a dozen more than needed.

RADIO DEAD SPOTS.

A radio broadcaster in Dayton, O., has been fined for operating a radio station without a license and transmitting a false call by radio. This is the first case of the kind in America. It is not likely to be the last.

It represents progress because it means official protection of legitimate broadcasters from unauthorized broadcasters, and protection of the public from irresponsible meddlers.

Traffic in the ether is to be regulated, like any other traffic. It is a difficult and delicate job, but it can be done.

If your radio outfit doesn't work right, don't blame it hastily on your receiving set or your amateurish installation. You may simply be in a "dead spot."

Such spots seem to be scattered around more plentifully than anybody has imagined. Remarkable discoveries were made recently by a Cleveland radio editor driving around the town and its suburbs in a radio-equipped automobile.

The investigator found that over and over again, as he moved along, a radio wave would fade from full volume to a whisper with a fifty-foot change of location, not only among buildings but in open spaces with no interference in sight. Reception was not impaired by the motion of the car, but strong signals from local broadcasting stations faded without any apparent reason in scores of places.

Some of the dead spots were big, covering miles of area. Others were incredibly small. Sometimes there was an obvious explanation in the presence of a steel building or bridge; at other times there was no imaginable explanation.

If it is true in one city, it is probably true in other cities. Similar surveys might be made profitably in any community.

The experimenter in this case draws the obvious moral that a receiving set will not give the same results in any two locations. He gives this practical suggestion: "If you have an aerial which has never given good results, move it to another location if possible, even though only a few yards away. That may get you away from a dead spot."

It is said there may be cases where merely moving a loop to another room in the house will give better results.

ADVENTURES IN READING.

The American Library association has prepared courses of reading, adapted to various tastes and needs, for people who want to read with a purpose and don't know quite where to begin. Readers can secure information about these courses from any public library.

There are other ways to pursue serious reading and to make it a real adventure. One way, suggested by a wise English teacher who believes in good books but hasn't much interest in formal reading "lists," is to start with one interesting volume and follow where it leads. The first book may be a good novel or a volume of poetry or it may be a scientific work or history or biography or anything else. Whatever its classification it becomes a guide book in the intelligent reader's hands. He can follow up its allusions—to be found in other books. If it is fiction, it may interest him in its author's biography, in the history of the time of which it tells, in the locality involved, in art or science. Any reader who follows such a trail will find himself well on the way toward a liberal education. And reading will become a great adventure to him.

CHILDHOOD'S RISK.

"There are three periods in the life of every one," declares George A. Bellany, Cleveland social worker. "Between birth and 10 years imagination is developed. The child's mind is simply a receptacle for what society pours into it."

"From 10 years to 20, what society has poured in is reshaped. Here guidance is essential. The third, adult, stage, is when the individual breaks away from the moorings."

"What we have poured into their minds in the first ten years and have guided during the next ten will decide to a large degree what the children will be when adult."

From which it may be concluded that it is rather a risky business being a child at the mercy of grown-up ways and grown-up teachings. Fortunately, however, for childhood and for civilization and for the human race, there seems to be developing in the world greater appreciation of childhood needs, childhood's rights and childhood's problems.

GALESBURG'S GASOLINE IDEA.

Galesburg's fire and police departments, like those of other cities, use a lot of gasoline these days. So Galesburg is contemplating installation of a city gasoline station, with a thousand-gallon tank. It is figured that bids to supply the city with gasoline will bring the cost to the city below the present tank-wagon price, and that thus the city will save money by it. Galesburg is now under the city manager plan of government. Instead of having a city purchasing agent, as formerly, now each department makes its own purchases. All bills and orders are in duplicate, and no bill is paid until it is o. k'd. by the city manager.

Kewanee is another city that is investigating advisability of installing a city gasoline station.

The most intolerable thing—to the French and Spaniards—about those ruffian Riffians is that they keep right on fighting the French and Spaniards after they've been licked.

The Chinese are all right in their way, but any pair of woolen socks they wash will never fit the same person again.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

by Olive Roberts Barton

NO. 7—THE LAST OF THE GARDEN

"Oh, dear!" cried Nancy. "This isn't in the picture at all."

Morgiana had scarcely finished her story when Mister Blue Cap came to take the twins away.

"Oh, must you go?" said Morgiana. "I'm sorry, for I love to have company. It is so pleasant here in the garden."

"Was that all there was to All Baba?" asked Nick. "What became of him after the forty thieves were all dead and their captain got away?"

"The bad captain came back another time," said Morgiana. "This time he pretended he was a distinguished traveler. But he wouldn't eat any salt when he sat down to dine with my master."

"This made me suspicious and peeping into the dining room, I recognized the old rascal at once."

"So I gave the alarm and he jumped out of the window and fled. We haven't heard from him since. Here comes Mister All Baba now, and his wife also."

"I heard you tell these children about my narrow escapes," said All Baba. "If they stay awhile longer I shall tell them all about the treasures I found in the robbers' cave. I will show them such as I have here."

"Oh, thank you," said Nancy and Nick. "Shall we have time, Mister Blue Cap?"

Mister Blue Cap looked at his watch. "I can't tell exactly," he said. "It is time for the wedding in the picture next door, and the little flower-girl and page haven't arrived to take their place. But go on and see what these kind people have to show you."

"I think Morgiana scared him off for good," said All Baba.

One advantage of democracy is that like death or war, it is final.

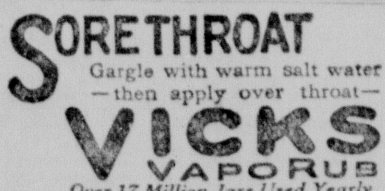

If a monarch, or even a ministry or Parliament, makes a certain decision, it may be wrong, and those disagree or aggrieved cherish the ambition of reopening it. But if the people vote it, right or wrong, it is settled, and nobody considers doing anything about it, at least until the next regular appeal to the people.

Recognition of this fact makes democracy really the stabilist form of government. When the election is over, everybody accepts it.

One election is over. And it has settled some things. Chiefly, it has settled that "Al" Smith is to be reckoned with at the next election.

Either he will be the Democratic nominee for president, or the fight that prevents his nomination will have left scars like those of the last campaign. Either way, Republicans look on the situation with complacency.

If Smith is nominated, all the forces of democracy, prejudice and fundamentalism will be automatically added to the Republican column. If he is

The TANGLE

LETTER FROM NURSE HANNAH SMITH TO MRS. LESLIE PRESCOTT

My dear Mrs. Prescott:

I was very glad to get your letter because Mrs. Atherton had said to me that probably if you were not here, Miss Perier would want to come and see the children anyway, and of course, I would want to know how you would feel about having a stranger come into the nursery when you were not here.

Now, of course, I will do exactly as you say about Miss Perier's visit though I'm afraid I cannot keep Mrs. Prescott, Sr., out of the nursery if she knows that Miss Perier is to be here.

I have had nothing to say to Mrs. Prescott since you went away. This morning she came to the door and said she was going to take the car for a little ride and she would like to take Sydney with her. I told her I was very sorry but I had promised you that I would not allow either of the children to go out in the car with anyone except myself.

She was very angry and I know that she called up Mr. Prescott and asked him if she could not take the baby with her. Evidently he told her that you had given me strict orders, for she did not come back to get him.

As you see, I am sending the kisses that Jack and Sydney have left on a separate piece of paper for you.

You will see by the impression of their adorable little mouths on the enclosed paper that they took a great deal of pains to purse their lips up into baby kisses. They were quite happy to know that Muvver would be able to press her lips directly upon the kiss of their pictured lips. I think it was a very charming idea. It was suggested by Mrs. Atherton.

"Do you think that Muvver will send us some kisses like we did her?" asked little Jack. "Tell her just how she can do it by using that funny red lipstick I have seen her use."

"You might tell her that I would send her some of Nanna's but I'm afraid to tell her what Buddy and I are doing, for she never likes us to do anything that she doesn't think of us doing first."

"The other day she said that she thought it was dreadful for Muvver to put red on her lips and I told her that Muvver did not put as much on her lips as Nanna did herself. I knew then I had said something that was not right so I said, 'Of course you have to use the funny red stick to fill up the wrinkles in your own lips, Nanna.'"

I had to turn away, Mrs. Prescott, to hide a smile, and I am sure that Mrs. Prescott, Sr., thought it was all my fault.

Be sure and remember that everything is all right with the children. Every night little Jack stands up straight and I put Sydney in his arms, and he says the little promise that you have taught him. He has taken to adding:

"And when I get big, I'll take care of my Muvver too."

I'll write you often, and you're not to worry about the children. You know I love them almost as much as you do.

Respectfully yours,

HANNAH.

STEPHENSON GOES TO PENITENTIARY FOR GIRL'S DEATH

Former Grand Dragon Starts Life Sentence in Michigan City

Noblesville, Ind., Nov. 21.—(AP)—Before dawn today D. C. Stephenson, former Grand Dragon of the Indiana Ku Klux Klan, was on his way to Michigan City to begin serving a life sentence for the murder of Madge Oberholtzer of Indianapolis.

The prisoner was in charge of Sheriff C. A. Gooding and two deputies. He was not shackled or handcuffed. Only a few newspaper men who had kept watch over the Hamilton county jail since Judge Sparks yesterday declined to stay the sentence one month, witnessed the departure. They followed the officers and their prisoner in a second auto. Stephenson's attorneys yesterday asked that he be kept here one month while they prepared petition for a new trial.

Still in Hopes.

Stephenson, smiling and apparently in good spirits still was confident that "the last chapter has not been written" and he will ultimately win his release.

Miss Oberholtzer died last April 14, 29 days after she swallowed poison at Hammond, Ind., following an alleged abduction and attack by Stephenson. The state charged the former Klan leader was guilty of murder because he was responsible for the girl's act. Earl Gentry and Earl Klenck, bodyguards of Stephenson and co-defendants, were acquitted by the same jury which a week ago today found their leader guilty.

Stephenson, less than a year ago a political leader in Indiana, has charged that there is "some great power determined to get" him, behind the prosecution. He has held steady to his earlier assertions that he was not responsible for Miss Oberholtzer's death.

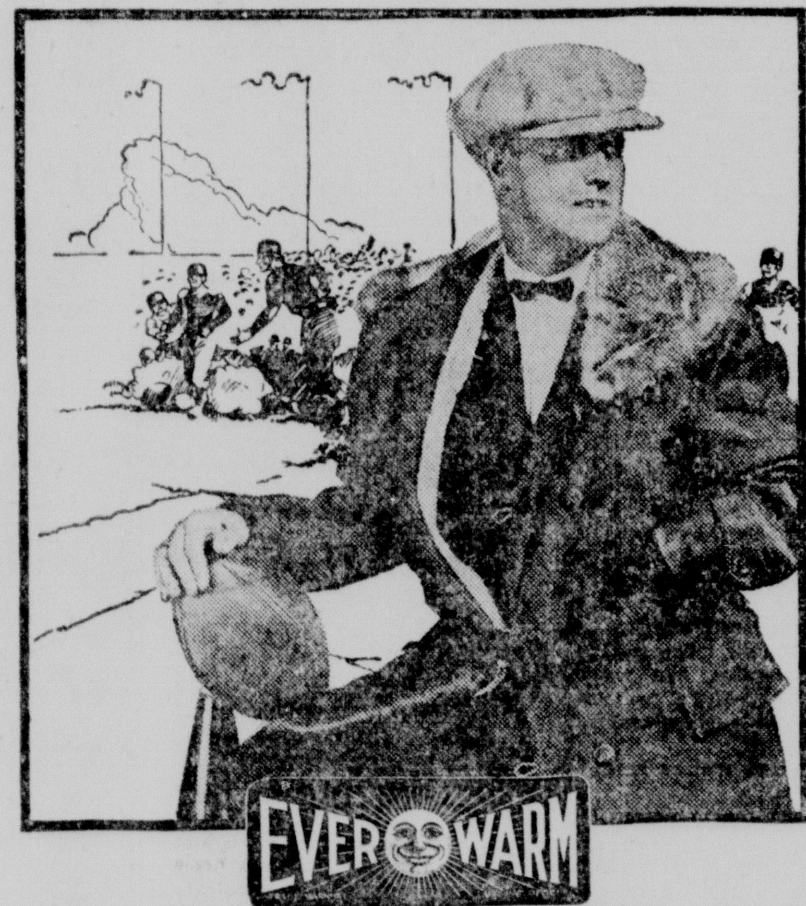

COTTON PRODUCTION

Washington, Nov. 21.—(AP)—Cotton production this year probably will total 15,298,000 equivalent 500 pound bales, the department of agriculture today announced. A fortnight ago 15,386,000 bales were forecast.

Production last year was 13,627,936 bales. Cotton of this year's crop gathered prior to Nov. 14 totalled 12,249,935 running bales counting round as half bales and excluding linters compared with 11,162,235 bales to that date last year and 8,369,498 in 1923 the census bureau today announced.

SYNOPSIS
Connemara Moore is aboard a mysterious yacht. It is past midnight and she is in the company of David Lacy, Pooch, McTish, Doc and Sweetie, none of whom she ever saw before tonight. Connemara and Sweetie have been drenched in the storm but have fashioned makeshift costumes to replace the dampened garments. Connemara had stolen away from her aunt's Connecticut home, disguised as a nun, rather than announce her engagement, as Aunt Celimena had expected her to do.

"So, that's it!" he exclaimed. "McTish must have installed it, and on my own boat, he has his nerve—? Then to Doc, 'What have you been trying to do? Come, now, hand it out straight and cut out the trimmings.'"

"Do?" in a tone of puzzled innocence. "Nawthin—just rolled over to keep me wings from goin' to sleep."

"And purely by accident found this button, I suppose."

"That's it, Cap," returned Doc airily. "I found it there and tried it to see what would happen."

"Of course, you couldn't by any chance have been signaling?"

"Signalin'! Far be it from me," the big man declared. "I did see some little flashes like, comin' from that there stick" (indicating the mast with a jerk of his head sideways) "but I didn't think they meant nothin'. Who'd I be signalin' to round here, hey?"

"Well, see you don't try to find some one," Lacy said grimly. "and get back to where you were before. Quick, now!"

"Come now hand it out straight!"

Under the prod of an impatient foot Doc was forced back to his old position forward, and Lacy, scowling, made his way aft.

"I didn't see the flashes," he explained to McTish, "but he must have been sending off something. Have you any idea of our bearings?"

"We're off Sea Cliff noo," McTish replied, pointing abaft; "yon's Execution Light. An' this is the mou' o' Hempstead Harbor."

"We're not far from Bayville then," Lacy commented. "Now I'd suggest that we pull up anchor and head north, hugging the shore. I don't like the idea of our Swedish friend catching those signals."

The Scotchman's jaw fell in disgust. "Why, mon, that's what we want!" he exclaimed.

"Mac," the other returned, "I've a wholesome admiration for your cannyness and fighting ability, but you told me yourself that 'The Swede' had a half-dozen bruise aboard. We can't tackle them all. I hope Bob will succeed in locating them first."

"Weel, lad, I'm sorry if ye are afeared, but if ye'll just pick out one o' them—ye can pick on the safest—I'll tak' care o' the ither sax." In moments of excitement McTish became very Scotch indeed. He added, as if in mollification of his charge of cowardice, "But I see what's fashin' ye. It's the lassie."

"I suppose she's one of them," assented David gloomily. "But why should she have told me about the light in that case?"

"Because she's a smart-arse lassie an' able to pu' the wool over your eyes fine if ye give her half a chance," McTish declared with conviction.

"No," David insisted. "She was surprised. As surprised as I was. She wasn't acting."

"Maybe," the little Scot said dryly. "But I'd not put it past her."

"We're losing time," Lacy reminded him, ignoring this thrust,

"which is what you're playing for, of course. You do what I say and head north or I take back the boat. You've bagged enough now with two birds and Sweetie, to say nothing of the fifty thousand—"

"Which I see that ye keep in yer pants," broke in McTish, grinning. "an' a fine crook ye are yersef. I'll start her up, laddie, on one condition—that ye warn the gir-r-l as far awa' frae that button as ye do the rest. I'm trustin' name o' them the nicht."

To these terms Lacy consented with suspicious readiness, and after they had got under way hurried aft to Connemara.

The latter greeted him with a little smile, the gaiety of which was slightly forced.

"Look here," she said, "I've been thinking. I believe I've guessed the riddle. Only you'll have to tell me when it's to be released. I'm horribly curious."

"If by 'it' you mean your friend Pooch, I should say in about twenty years—though sometimes they do get off for good behavior."

He was suddenly quite sure she was making a tremendous effort to keep her lips from trembling, but she continued to smile unconcernedly.

"This is a movie, isn't it—in thirty-seven reels? That's why I wanted to know when it was to be released, so that I could see the results. I've never taken part in one before. And here we all are, Pooch and Doc, two perfect ducks of villains, and Sweetie, the subterfuge—isn't that what you'd call her, or am I going back to Aunt Celimena's days?"

Then there are cars being stolen and spilled all over the landscape, and messages in cipher, and flashes from matheads and motorboats popping up out of nowhere. I'm properly thrilled, and, besides, I'm the star, I suppose. And the salaries are true, too—I never believed 'em—but wow! fifty thousand a night!"

"As long as you're casting us, would you mind telling me my role?"

A moment she studied him, slightly to his discomfort. Then, "Let's see your profile—him—"

"Is it as bad as that?"

"Yes, every bit—and you're the handsome juvenile"—he bowed—"or else one of those ridiculous sheiks." Here he did not bow, but instead answered, "And I'll play opposite you—on the other side of the bars."

"You mean?"

"I'll give you one guess. It ought to be easy, for you've been awfully lucky if you haven't looked through them before."

"Something, actually thrilling then; how much more thrilling, when all the time I've been looking for the camera man!" She paused dramatically. "Oh, I get it; you're not the handsome juvenile—you're the director, and trying to put me, in the spirit of my role" (she looked down). "But where are the puttees?"

"You are clever!" he returned, perhaps with not as much aplomb as he would have liked, "but you're too good for this game. Why don't you try something less desperate? With your talent you could go far on the stage."

"Farther than fifty thousand?" Connemara challenged him with a laugh. "Aren't you optimistic?"

"Say," remarked a voice just behind them, its tones a trifle shrill. "I guess I wouldn't harp too much on that fifty thousand if I were you, Sister. Not in present company, anyhow."

With a queer sense of shock, Connemara and Lacy spun about to behold the pert little figure of Sweetie, seated nonchalantly on the prostrate Pooch, her hands in her pockets, swaying to and fro, entirely unmoved by his protesting grunts and writhings.

"To think Sister'd tie the double cross on Poochie," she informed the night about them with an air of commiseration that made her unwilling cushion writhe afresh. "An' him lying here all nicely roped up like he was doin' some Lon Chaney stunt. An' you gotta nerve too, Mr. Klassy Klotches" (this to Lacy) "tryin' to steal poor Poochie's skirt away from him, when he can't look out for himself." She paused a moment to illustrate her pity by digging her exaggerated French heels deep in the paunch of the prostrate Pooch, then addressed him, directly this time.

PERSIAN CAPITAL IS FABLED CITY OF MYSTIC EAST

A New Shah Ascended the Famous Peacock Throne

Washington, D. C., Nov. 21.—Recent dispatches from Persia announce the deposition of the Kajar dynasty, which has ruled the country for more than 150 years, and the ascension of a new Shah to the famous Peacock Throne in Teheran.

"Despite Persia's traditional conservatism in governmental affairs, Teheran, its capital, is a city of kaleidoscopic contrasts," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic Society. "Visitors may enter through any one of its twelve beautiful gates, whose glazed tiles glisten in the sunlight, and find spread before them a dingy collection of mud houses rubbing elbows with palatial residences enclosing flower-filled gardens. A lumbering camel, seemingly just stepped out of a priceless old Persian rug, may draw aside to allow the passage of a high-powered motor car bearing a wealthy Persian en route to his villa on the outskirts of the city."

Linked With "Arabian Nights"

"Teheran has not always been the capital of Persia. Rhages or Rei, its predecessor, the ruins of which are near-by, was a bustling city of one and a half millions in the Middle Ages. As the birthplace of Harun al-Rashid, Caliph of Baghdad, the fifth and most renowned of the Abbasides, its name is forever linked with the 'Arabian Nights.' This city, also called Rhagae, was destroyed by Joghiz Khan and Timur."

"Modern Teheran's position seventy miles south of the Caspian Sea, commanding the highways of the extensive upland plateau and the entrance to the Elburz Passes, has made it the center of a considerable caravan trade, though it does not rank high as an industrial city. Its population is roughly estimated at 300,000 in winter, but in summer the number diminishes one third. For, although the district lies in the approximate latitude of Cape Hatteras, and nine months of the year bring it cool nights and sunshiny days, the three months of summer are uncomfortably hot and dry."

"The palace of the deposed Shah is located in the 'Ark,' or former citadel, in the middle of the city. Here is the Salaam Court, containing the large Takht-i-Khaneh, or Throne Room, where the Shah received his people at his New Year's reception, three months and more after the Western World ushered in a new year. This reception formerly was a brilliant affair; the royal band played all through the ceremony, the court poet was much in evidence with the Shah's greetings for the new season, and the Shah himself was seated in a jeweled chair on a beautiful marble throne, which, however, should not be confused with the priceless Peacock Throne kept in the Treasure Vault."

World's Costliest "Furniture"

"The Office of the Commandant of the Imperial Guards, the Apartments of the Grand Vizier and the Imperial Archives are separated from the main palace by a shady rose garden, but one's interest naturally centers in the Treasure Vault wherein are kept the Persian Crown jewels."

"Nadir Shah, who was also known as Kuli Khan, was Shah of Persia from 1736 to 1747. Shortly after he was crowned he invaded India, laid waste to the country and sacked Delhi. It was he who laid down his bare sword as a sign that the massacre might begin and refused to lift it until thousands of the inhabitants had been murdered. And he it was who brought the Peacock Throne to Teheran where it has been since 1739."

"This gorgeous chair of state is encrusted with thousands of precious jewels; rubies, diamonds, emeralds and so many others that one is almost blinded by its coruscant splendor. Embellished on the back is the

Denies Hell

Dr. Claude E. Sayre, pastor of a Wichita, Kas., church, has aroused great interest by his series of sermons on Hell. He denies that there is either a Hell or a devil, and adds: "The only devil that exists in this or any other world is a man-made devil created for the purpose of making the people afraid and holding them in a state of bondage and superstition."

large peacock from which the throne takes its name, with its tail spread out in a magnificence no living peacock ever attained. Taken as one piece of furniture, the Peacock Throne might easily be called the most expensive in the world, for it is valued at thirty millions of dollars.

Where East Meets West.

"Keeping it company is the sword of Timur, the Tartar, which doubtless accompanied him on his victorious march through Persia and Syria as far as the frontier of Egypt, in those bloodthirsty days when invasion and conquest were the lifelong ambitions of every great man. In the Treasure Vault also is a huge terrestrial globe weighing eighty pounds, set with 31,365 jewels, and nearby is the diamond known as the Dary-i-Nur or 'Sea of Light' weighing 186 carats, which Nadir Shah did not overlook at Delhi."

"Teheran might well be called the meeting place of East and West, for in the southern portion of the city, tucked away behind the pale pink and blue plaster walls, may be found the majority of the natives with their bare heads and their own circles of life hardly untouched since the early years. In the northern part the Western influence is seen, felt and heard in the shape of well-graded streets, electric lights, movies, European shops, hotels, restaurants, and even a tramway. The airplane has made its way to Teheran, the Drill Square north of the central square sharing honors as an aviation field and a football gridiron."

"Persia is fast adopting modern ways. The new ruler, who is referred to in a dispatch from Teheran as 'King' Pahlavia Reza Khan, has released all political prisoners and issued a decree reducing the price of bread."

New York—Fame, elusive and illusory, is the witch that draws the innocent to the boiling kettle that is New York. Success is a money sermon can be made almost anywhere one might happen to be, but, speciously enough, the stamp of New York must be on a name in most lines of endeavor to make it a success.

And what heart-breaks this chase after fame brings! Do you know that there is a floating population of more than 1000 stage-struck boys, girls, men and women on Broadway? The significance of this situation lies in the fact that if one in one thousand ever reaches the estate of electric lights he or she is counted lucky.

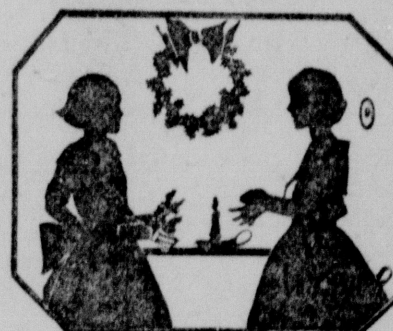

These glory-chasers make the rounds of the various booking agencies. Some of them are crude and raw from shops, stores and farms. Some have had a little experience in stock or amateur theatricals. The race to fame on Broadway appears as just a step to them but as days pass and even chorus and super jobs fail to materialize they drop out of the questioning line and others take their places.

For instance, to the office of Chamberlain Brown, a booking agent, there came each day 500 would-be thespians. They do not even see Brown. They are told to write a letter, stating their qualifications. From these letters Brown selects certain applicants for a two-minute interview. He judges them on first glance. In that brief second hope or despair is born for many an applicant. It may be their last try.

Brown estimates that one-fifth of the applicants who call each day are old repeaters and the rest are new faces. It would appear that if only the space of a week were considered the transient seekers of stage fame number far more than 1000.

Yet fame is not impossible of achievement through this scheme. Not long ago a fellow named Wallace Kolb was interviewed by Brown.

Brown saw in him a prototype of Glenn Hunter. He knew that a play had been written especially with Hunter in view as the hero, but Hunter was unavailable for the part. Brown did secure for Kolb an engagement with an upstate stock company. Kolb made a hit in a very he-mannish role that had been played by Louis Wolheim. It was something quite different from a Glenn Hunter role. But on his success in that Kolb has been recalled to Broadway to be featured in the role that had been intended for Hunter.

A LONDON DIVERSION

London, Nov. 21.—(AP)—Several women of social prominence have organized a dressmakers' club where they may spend part of their spare time in the useful task of making their own garments. Although quite able to make needed purchases, the women say they have become bored with continual bridge parties and desire to try their hands at making garments.

The new club is at Kensington. Instead of the usual car and gossip room, there is a sewing room which is fitted with a cutting table, sewing machines and other necessities. A practical dressmaker, a member of the club, is the manager.

ANCIENT GATEWAY BLOCKS PROGRESS OF MODERN TRAMS

Lovers of Art and History
Prevail in the Fight Against Destruction

Washington, D. C., Nov. 23.—With so many ancient landmarks tumbling before the pick and steam shovel of modern progress the news that an ancient gateway in Perugia, one of Italy's famous "hill towns," has been saved from destruction through popular appeal is welcome to lovers of antiquity. Permission has been granted by the Commune of the town to run electric trams through this gateway, near the Palazzo del Popolo, famous palace, but public indignation brought about a rescinding of the permit.

"The city has known one of the stormiest and bloodiest of histories," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic Society. "High on a hill commanding the River Tiber, Perugia has been safe from enemies from without, but it has been torn by internal quarrels. In the decline of Rome no barbarian mounted its walls, but the plots of its nobility and the quick tempers of its citizens resulted often in violent tempers that went on until one side or the other was almost exterminated."

A City on a Hilltop
"Perugia is almost midway between Rome and Florence, although not on the main line railroad connecting the two cities. Like Siena and Assisi, its neighbors, it is built in antiquated style, partly on top of a group of hills and partly on the slopes, with the views of the Apennines in every direction. It has a picturesque accident of irregularity, of rising and falling ground, and of striking combinations of light, shade and color."

"Everywhere except on the short spiral ridge the streets are staircases and toboggan slides. Everywhere one climbs or burrows. The life of a Perugian is truly one of ups and downs."

"On the map, Perugia is spread out like a great stone-scaled dragon on its rock, crouching over the country and extending long paws down the valley side. Nature furnishes back-grounds of olive-covered hills and distant mountains, while nearly every vista on its staircases is broken and framed by the graceful stone arches that buttress the tall houses. The old towers and donjons have largely disappeared, but the atmosphere of the town is military and despotic. Many houses still show traces of the heavy chains that barred the streets after nightfall, when, if a man forgot his steel undershirt, he came home in a wooden one!"

No Modern Perugia
"Perugia is really four cities in one. There is the ancient Etruscan Perugia, with its walls and stone gateways; the Roman Perugia, whose masonry rests on what remained of the Etruscan city after the natives had set fire to it; the medieval Perugia of the Baglioni, built on the Roman foundations; and the Renaissance Perugia of the Popes, reared on the ashes of the Baglioni palaces."

"In the strict sense, however, there is no modern Perugia. The railroad station is, as in most European cities, far outside the ancient city walls. Two street car lines, a few automobiles, and some up-to-date shops, clustered around the tourist center, are the only intruders the present has been able to make. There has been no temptation to build since the 16th century. The patches added to its crumbling ramparts and houses in the last four hundred years have enhanced their natural attractiveness."

"The rich pastoral beauty and repose of Perugia's surroundings have left their mark on the art of the city. As the rest of the renowned Umbrian school is painting it earned a high place in the realms of Italian art during the 15th century, when Perugia was the most powerful city in this part of Italy. The neighborhood of Siena and the religious atmosphere of nearby Assisi and Loretto doubtless exercised an influence on the prevailing style, which has been described as lacking dramatic power but being rich in reverie. Raphael was once a student of the Perugian master, Pietro Vannucci. Today the walls of many of Perugia's churches and former palaces are alive with examples of the work of the school.

Stone Throwing Pastime

"In the main square by the side of the big unfinished Gothic Cathedral the life of the city once centered. Here the gentle Perugians played at one of the bloodiest and most dangerous games in the world—that of hurling stones at one another until often a dozen were killed and scores wounded. In times of peace this was the Perugian equivalent of a baseball game or the movies."

"According to some critics Perugia has, in the Porta Augusta, one of the finest gates in the world. It befits in black magnificence above a whole quarter of the town, its base Early Roman, the middle sections Renaissance, and the airy top Renaissance. The whole is now blackened with dust, decay and fire, and, while it is not imposing in the sunlight, its heavy stone bucklers, fluted pilasters and massive base are awe-inspiring in the damp and gloom, when mist is flying through the streets. 'These Umbrian cities seem so Roman,' says one writer, 'that the sight of Caesar's legions marching through them, with lances and buckles flashing in the sun, would be the most natural thing possible."

Dr. Cummings' Health Column

BY DR. HUGH S. CUMMINGS

Surgeon General, United States Public Health Service.

Erysipelas is an acute contagious disease, an inflammation of the skin, caused by an organism known as a streptococcus. Under certain conditions erysipelas has approached epidemic proportions. It is some what contagious particularly if those exposed have slight wounds or are undergoing surgical operations.

When erysipelas is mild in character there is usually redness of the skin. The skin will also feel somewhat hard and thickened. This redness, though at first limited to a small area about the wound, tends to spread and affect the sound skin near by until sometimes an entire limb or a large area of the body may become involved.

There is usually considerable pain, coupled with much heat and tingling in the part of the body affected. As the disease advances that portion of the skin which is first attacked becomes less inflamed, takes on a yellowish appearance, and finally the outer skin flakes off. The inflammation in general gradually disappears.

Sometimes it breaks out again and it has been known to pass over the original area the second time. It frequently happens that the subcutaneous tissues become extensively involved in the inflammation and pus is formed.

Occasionally gangrene develops in the affected parts. Other complications are not unusual and when these occur they may affect the surface of the body and sometimes the serous membranes and the pleura, and result in pleurisy, particularly if the tissues of the throat are involved.

Erysipelas usually begins with a chill followed by a high fever. It may be a complication of wounds but is more frequently developed without any apparent injury. A large majority of the cases begin on the face, usually on the nose, first as a small red spot which is soon elevated above the surrounding skin and gradually or rapidly spreads over the face and ears and sometimes over the entire scalp.

The neck and chest and parts of the back and other parts of the body are occasionally involved. The skin becomes red, hot, painful and swollen and blisters may form. The swelling often is most marked about the eyes and ears.

It frequently happens that the eyes become closed and the patient's features so changed and distorted that the appearance once seen will not soon be forgotten.

If erysipelas is limited to the face and scalp it usually runs its course in a few days or weeks, but sometimes before the face is healed other parts of the body may become involved and the case may be prolonged. Abscesses beneath the skin are not uncommon. Besides these symptoms there is often loss of appetite, coated tongue, frequent vomiting and in some cases delirium and marked depression.

Although, in general, the outcome of erysipelas is favorable serious and occasionally fatal results follow from inflammation of the membrane of the brain and in some rare instances sudden death has occurred from suffocation. In persons weakened from previous diseases, erysipelas may result fatally.

One attack of this disease does not protect the individual from a recurring attack. A very fatal form of erysipelas sometimes attacks newborn babies, particularly in the first four weeks of their lives.

Erysipelas is only slightly contagious under ordinary circumstances, but persons suffering from wounds or scratches in the skin are very likely to be attacked. The patient should, therefore, be isolated, placed in a room by himself, and his attendant should be a healthy person free from any skin injury. Wounds should be carefully dressed with antiseptic solutions to prevent the development of the disease.

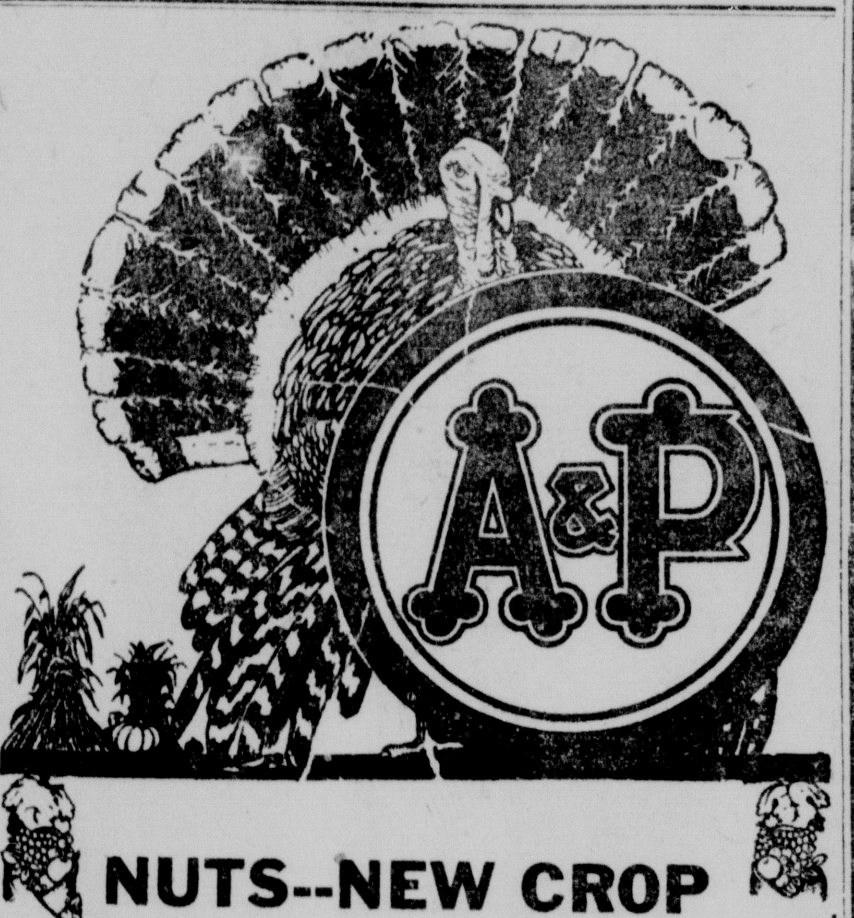

Erysipelas runs its course usually in from eight to fourteen days and sometimes in much less time and in most instances tends to a favorable termination. Beyond attention to the condition of the stomach and bowels, which may require the use of a gentle laxative, little is given in the way of medicine internally.

The diet should be light and should consist of milk, broths and puddings. If the temperature rises above 103 degrees Fahrenheit the patient should be given a cold bath. The chief point to remember in the treatment of erysipelas is that an abundance of nourishment should be administered in a light and digestible form.

The eyes may be frequently washed with a four per cent solution of boric acid that is four parts of boric acid to one hundred parts of water. Very mild cases may be treated with cloths wet with boric acid which are placed upon the skin or by other mild measures. It is always well to call a physician in any case of erysipelas.

GRANGE TO PLAY
FIRST PRO GAME
ON THANKSGIVINGFamous Red Head Signs
Contract With Bears,
Chicago Team

Chicago, Nov. 23.—(AP)—Harold ("Red") Grange, the reigning football hero of the moment, will don his fighting toga again on Thanksgiving day, but he will not wear the famous "77" of collegiate days.

For Red has turned professional to follow, as he phrases it, the business he knows best.

Declaring that he had no training that would enable him to accept other alluring offers, the strawberry blonde warrior of the chalked field signed a contract yesterday that will place him in the Chicago Bears line-up for six games after which he will invade Florida during the holidays.

Ignored Dad's Advice.

In turning professional, Grange, who stands to build up a modest fortune in his post season appearances, flung against the wishes of his father, and also of coaches and friends at the University of Illinois. Grange senior, however took the move of his son philosophically, saying that after all he was able to look out for himself.

In addition to signing the football contract which was one of a score thrust at him when he returned from his final college triumph at Columbus last Saturday, Grange also signed Charles C. Pyle, a champion theatrical man, as his manager. Pyle's contract is for two years and it is understood that he will receive 25 percent of Grange's earnings.

After the football season, Grange is expected to embark on other paying ventures, including motion picture appearances, all of which is to enable him to earn money to repay his father for the sacrifices made for him and to aid in educating his brother.

To Finish Education.

"I believe the public will be better satisfied with my honesty and good motives if I turn my efforts to that field in which I have been most useful in order to reap a reward which will keep the home fires burning," was the famous red head's message to his friends. Grange promised that he would return to the University later to finish his education.

Red plays with the Bears here on Thursday against the Chicago Cardinals at Cubs Park. Next Sunday he plays against Columbus. Then the Bears will go east to play the Yellow Jackets at Philadelphia on Dec. 4 and the New York Giants at the Polo Grounds the day following. The following Sunday the Giants will appear at the Cub Park and a concluding game is planned for the same place Dec. 20.

Gets Big Money.

Contract terms were not made public, but it was understood that Grange was guaranteed $2,000 a game with ten percent on the first five thousand dollars, 20 percent on the second five and 40 percent on every dollar beyond that. On that basis it was estimated Grange would receive between $20,000 and $30,000 for his first game.

While Grange ranks high among Western Conference scorers and yard gainers this year, statisticians have pointed out that his record might have been greatly enhanced had he played in all games, particularly against weaker teams, in which he might have been expected to stage the long runs for which he is famous. It was recalled that in one game against a non-conference eleven he played but two minutes and never once touched the ball.

A THREE DAYS'
COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Company, Atlanta, Ga. (adv.)

DEFEATED MT.
MORRIS HIGH
ON SATURDAY

Dick McNicol fumbled the first snap and Mt. Morris recovered in the center of the field. Johnson circled the left end of the Dixon line for 20 yards and Alter gained three through left tackle. Johnson then chose right end for three. The Dixon line strengthened for Mt. Morris' two iron men and Alter lost a yard on his next attempt to skirt left end Johnson fell back to the 35 yard line for a drop kick which went wide and it was Dixon's ball on their own five yard line. Gordon McNicol punted the first one to the center of the field and was down soon enough to recover the fumbled ball on his own 40 yard line. Three line attacks made first down for Dixon and then Alter intercepted a pass on his own 40 yard line. A criss cross, with Johnson carrying the ball, made 12 yards around left end. Alter punted to Dixon's ten yard line. G. McNicol returning the punt to the Mt. Morris' 32 yard line. Three attempts to pass were blocked by Dixon and Mt. Morris punted to the middle of the gridiron. Keyes made 12 around right end and G. McNicol added five through center. McNicol piled up eight more through right tackle and G. McNicol again hit center, this time for six yards. O'Malley made three and a half around right end. The steam roller was again plowing through the Mt. Morris line. Dick McNicol carried the ball for a yard through center and McReynolds raced seven yards around left end to Mt. Morris' ten yard line. McNicol was called to the bench and Segner sent in for him. G. McNicol hit center for five yards and Segner found a small opening which permitted him to wiggle through for three more, when a five yard penalty was called against Dixon for off side. O'Malley was given the ball and lost two more yards, Dixon losing the ball to Mt. Morris on the latter's ten yard line after a gallant fight for another touchdown. Johnson made eight yards around right end and then Mt. Morris was penalized five yards for off side. They refused the penalty and Gordon McNicol grabbed one of Alter's high passes and carried it for a touchdown. Keyes kicking the goal. Dixon 20, Mt. Morris, 0.

G. McNicol booted the ball to Mt. Morris' 13 yard line. Alter passed to Johnson for 12 yards and Dixon was penalized five yards for off side. Marks was substituted for Kerst in the line and the half ended with the ball in Mt. Morris' possession, second down on their own 40 yard line.

Third Quarter

Mark Keller went to full back for Gordon McNicol and Keyes moved over to quarter. Mt. Morris kicked to Dixon, the ball rolling out of bounds. Dixon returned the punt to their own 10 yard line. Alter got away around right end for a 20 yard gain and Johnson hit the line for five more, when Dixon strengthened, the ball changing hands on Dixon's 15 yard line. "Chuck" Keyes sprinted around left end for 15 yards and O'Malley chose right end for five more. "Doc" Segner advanced the ball six more around left end and signs of weakness began to show up on the Mt. Morris side. Keyes hit the line for two yards and Segner made six more around left end. O'Malley reversed the end, and advanced three more.

Keller hit center for three and O'Malley followed in the same place for two more. On Mt. Morris' 40 yard line, Dixon was held and the ball changed hands. Alter fumbled and lost two yards and punted to Dixon's 20 yard line. Segner showing great speed in running the ball back to the 40 yard line before he could be halted. On the next snap, Dixon lost the ball on a fumble and Mt. Morris was penalized five yards for offside. On a criss cross play Johnson lost five more yards and Alter punted to Dixon's 30 yard line. Segner got away again and raced around right end for 20 yards. O'Malley took the left end unawares and advanced the ball ten more. Keyes gained four around left end, putting the ball on Mt. Morris' 15 yard line. Segner lost five when his interference failed as he tried left end and the quarter closed as Mt. Morris strengthened and held after the ball had reached their own 13 yard line.

Fourth Quarter

Johnson hit right tackle for a four yard gain. Leo Miller sprained his ankle and was helped to the bench. Paul Bruckner taking his place in the line. Alter hit center for six yards and Johnson went through right tackle for five. Seven more were gained through center by Alter and Johnson made three through right tackle. Alter fumbled the next off-fering and was carried for a two yard loss. Dixon strengthened at this stage and held Mt. Morris. Alter punted to Dixon's 25 yard line on the fourth down. Dixon returned the punt to the 40 yard line. Johnson tried a drop kick from this point but failed. McReynolds re-entered the game, relieving O'Malley and Gordon McNicol replaced M. Keller. "Wink" hit center for three yards and G. McNicol went around right end for eight yards. Keyes chose the left end for a 12 yard advance. Dick McNicol was sent in to relieve Keyes. McReynolds hit center twice in succession for three and then seven yards. Dixon's regular backfield was warming up for the last time in the 1925 conference schedule and plowed steadily down to the Mt. Morris ten yard line, where the opposition braced and held off the champions. Alter punting the first ball to the 40 yard line. G. McNicol snapped a pass to Keyes for 15 yards and on the next play, the principals reversed on another pass which made 25 yards and a touchdown. Keyes kicking the goal. Dixon 27, Mt. Morris, 0.

CHICAGO'S AUTO
TOLL HIGHEST IN CITY'S HISTORY706 Lives Have Been
Snuffed Out Thus Far
This Year

Chicago, Nov. 23.—(AP)—The automobile death toll in Chicago and vicinity for 1925 stood at 706 today, higher than for any previous year. Eighteen deaths were recorded here last week, including two on Sunday. Deaths in automobile mishaps in ten midwest states for the week numbered 86, as compared with 115 for the previous week. Ohio headed the list with 29 while Illinois reported 20 and Indiana 12. Others were Missouri and Oklahoma, 6 each; Texas and Minnesota, 4 each; South Dakota and Kansas, 2; North Dakota, 1.

The over Sunday toll of automobile mishaps was small, but nearly a score of persons met death in airplane and fire accidents, by drowning, poison and from a variety of other causes.

Millionaire Killed.

A. A. Young, a 20 year old San Francisco millionaire was killed and a companion probably fatally injured when a plane in which they were riding fell fifty feet at Red Wood City, Calif. At St. Joseph, Mo., eight persons were injured, one seriously, when an airplane struck a tree and crashed to the ground while making a forced landing.

A shooting mystery developed at Meadville, Mont., when three men, two of them miners, were slain as they emerged from the home of one of the victims. Mystery surrounds the death of four children of the family of Gus Collins, a miner of Hanna, Wyo., following the eating of poisoned or spoiled meat.

A ninety foot drop to a cement floor inside a huge concrete elevator under construction at Minneapolis, resulted in the death of four workmen. Drownings occurred near Pittsburgh and Sioux City, Iowa and one man was burned to death in a fire at Yankton, S. D.

AURORA LEGION
GAVE LOCALS A
BATTLE SUNDAYBut Dixon Was Victorious
by Score of Nine to Six

A team playing under the name of the Aurora Legion, composed largely of former Oak Park high school stars, put up a hard fight against the Dixon Legion at Brown Field Sunday afternoon and was defeated by a score of 9 to 6. Some important changes were noticeable in the Dixon lineup, which did not serve to hinder the speed, but on the contrary to benefit the playing of the team. Sheriff Risley was at his old position in the line and Clark Hess performed in the backfield with Vaughan and Dawson. Hartwell was absent from the lineup and will be for the remainder of the schedule.

Risley kicked off to Aurora and recovered a fumble on the 45 yard line. Dixon worked the ball down to Aurora's eight yard line where the visitors strengthened and held the ball changing hands. Smith dropped back to the five yard line to punt but the effort was blocked, the ball striking back of the goal, making it a safety for Dixon and scoring two points.

Clark Hess replaced Hudson at the opening of the second period. Dawson passed to Whipple for 30 yards, advancing the ball to the visitor's 22 yard line. Dawson sent another nice pass for to C. Hess advancing the ball to Aurora's five yard line, where the visitors held and the ball changed hands. Aurora tried to find a hole in the Dixon line on two attempts and then punted to the center of the field.

In the third quarter, Aurora kicked to Dixon and the local Legion worked the ball down to Aurora's five yard line when Dawson snapped a short pass to "Butch" Whipple back of the goal line for a touchdown, Risley kicking the goal. Dixon, 9; Aurora, 0.

The fourth was the most spectacular of the four quarters. Hudson opened up his bag of tricks with two nine yard dashes through the line and advanced the ball to Aurora's 15 yard line. Dawson dropped back for a drop kick which was wide. Komes whipped a pass over to Roederik which was good for 40 yards and a touchdown for the visitors, Komes failing to kick the goal.

The Lineup.

Aurora Legion—Torchey, lg; Eggert, lt; Miller, lg; Haug, c; Hock-sprung, rg; Oxie, rt; Roederik, re; Komes, qb; Kruger, lbh; Ries, rbh; Smith, fb.

BROUGHT RELIEF
AFTER 2 YEARS
SUFFERING

"The makers of Tanlac will always have my warmest thanks, for I don't consider it any exaggeration to say I owe my life and present good health to Tanlac," is the striking statement of Andrew Groeschner, Bremen.

"Words simply can't express the misery I endured for 2 years from indigestion. At times my pains would catch me around the heart and almost cut off my breath. These awful pains would last two and three hours. My nerves were all unstrung. I slept poorly and got in such a bad way that my days seemed to be shortening rapidly."

"I tried everything, but disappointment was my only reward until I began taking Tanlac. I have been taking Tanlac off and on for a year now and feel so different that there's no room for comparison. I eat good and sleep good and feel that Tanlac has given me a new lease on life."

SYNOPSIS

Connemara Moore was to announce her engagement before midnight or he disinherited. Instead, she dressed herself as a nun, stole out of Aunt Celine's Connecticut home, hailed David Lacy, who was passing, and drove with him to Long Island Sound. Now he is aboard a yacht with Lacy, Pooch, McTish, Doc and Sweetie, all strangers to her until a few hours before. There has been fighting and much talk of bootlegging and pursuit by revenue officers.

"Just tell the flip gentleman what you'll do to him, when you get loose—pretty now, an' polite, ol' dear. Aw! that ain't pretty, Poochie! Say, Sister, you'd better stick your fingers in your ears. When Pooch is sore, what he says ain't fit for publication in the 'Police Gazette'."

It was all very incomprehensible. Lacy reflected uncomfortably. Sweetie's charge of intimacy on the part of the girl at his side with a grotesque figure like Pooch was impossible, and made purely through malevolence, of course. But with him she must be connected in some way.

He decided he must talk with Sweetie. She was shrewd but volatile, and if voluble might say too much. However, he did not feel so much like pumping her when he had left the other girl and had joined the slim figure now at the rail. Pert as were her sharp little features, hard the snappy black eyes, her face was attractive, pathetic as well—almost that of a child, he thought, yet as old as the ages with a wisdom it should not have had. And feeling the pity of it, he made a bad beginning.

"You've got too good a mind, little one," he said, "to waste in a game like this."

"For Gawd's sake, haven't you any other line?" she retorted tartly. "You was handing that to Sister a minute ago. But I notice, like most sky pilots, you pass the hat first, and fifty grand's some c'lection, I'll tell the world."

"That's so. Well, I'll can the sermon. It's your lead—or, is this any better?" And, muttering to himself, "Rotten taste with the other looking on, but I must find out about that ship," he placed his arm around the tight little waist, and not at all tentatively. At which Sweetie softly yielded to his embrace and her arm stole round him in turn.

A moment or so they sat, conversing in slangy and inconsequential nothings, she snuggling closer, when suddenly his hand closed on hers, like a vise.

"No you don't!" he exclaimed. She giggled. "As a dip, I'm a dumb-bell," she said, not at all embarrassed, "but never mind; go on don't let a little thing like that break up a petting party."

"You're right. Such a contretemps but adds to the needed spice to love."

"Country town adds spice!" Say, are you thinking of going ashore to Bayville? You are the limit," she added, "and no three miles to you neither; you stretch clear to Bermuda."

"Speaking to that motion," he replied, "I wonder if that ship'll be where the Swede promised."

"Wise, aren't you?" she asked sweetly. "You think just because you've loved me up a little I'll give you that info. Well, you can leave your fin there awry, but that's all the good it'll do you."

Now, during this conversation Connemara had first looked volumes, then tossed her head, again returned to study the darkness over the lee rail. Several times she repeated this maneuver, though discreetly, as she pondered over his status with the gang and, what seemed more important, with the girl. He was undeniably charming; but, then, charming men were sometimes strangely interested in girls far beneath them. And too, charming men made, so those experienced said, the most expert of criminals. He was brave, handsome—of course that was not to the point—but he seemed so eminently well bred and—well, anyway, Connemara also was finding things a bit incomprehensible.

But what was that staccato put-put of their quarter! That good-looking Harvard boy back again? She made out the lines of the oncoming bulk. It was longer and beamier than Bob's little craft; larger even than the Bloody Nuisance. And that gruff hail was not at all like the gallant Bob's.

"Stand by, or we'll fire!" "Golly!" said Connie. "They're looking for my salary again. I knew it was too good to last." And reaching for support, instead of the rail she clutched the hand of Lacy, who, at the sound, had sprung to her side.

The bald pate of the Scot, like a moonlit desert with an auburn morage, appeared once more over the cockpit. He chuckled audibly.

"Ye've lost, Davie; there's the Swede."

"Yes, confound your Scotch dourness, or whatever you call it! I believe you monkeyed with that engine on purpose."

He shrugged his shoulders helplessly, adding, "All right, I've picked my man; you pick your 'sax,' old Scot. And I hope you get killed."

But immediately the demand was repeated from the leader of the crew whom they could dimly discern through the murk, and Lacy turned to the girl.

"Can you swim as far as that shore—if we get in trouble?"

With her nod of assent, he picked her up bodily and almost threw her in the cockpit, growling out, "Lie low; they may fire"; then, tossing a life belt after her, temporized with Fate as personified in that insolent voice, by running to the wheel and ordering McTish to address the newcomers as they circled round them.

"Who is it speakin' us?" roared the latter through cupped hands. "Are ye some o' them damned revenooers?"

"You bloody Scotch stool pigeon, bring that sea-goin' hack of yours alongside or we'll blow you to—!" The wind muffled this last, but the speaker's geography, Connie was sure, was impressively accurate.

A moment Lacy reflected, as he caught the gleam of a six-pounder. There were seven against the two, nine if you counted Doc and Pooch, who would be freed the moment the others came aboard. His brain, working with lightning rapidity, showed him only one possible way out—a chance in a hundred, at that. The Swede's craft was an old tub, the nose of their own of steel. It was a desperate expedient he had in mind, but it might succeed.

"All right," he called, "we'll go about. You heave to and wait for us." And whirling the wheel, he swung the nose of the Bloody Nuisance the five boat's lengths of clear water that now lay between them, and before the bewildered crew on the other boat had time to diagnose the maneuver, were upon them.

Amidships the Bloody Nuisance struck, stoving in her enemy's side, and blunting as she did so her own gallant nose. There was a crash, the shearing of shorn timbers and plates, a wild medley of oaths, and the smaller boat backed out, as the other craft listed, the water pouring through the gaping wound in her side.

But at this point their own engine balked; and time had been lost in the extrication. There was not enough clear water now between the two crafts to repel the boarders.

Up chain and rope, and over the rail they swarmed, six of them, the seventh falling backward with the bark from McTish's revolver, which, however, was instantly knocked from his hand.

Too Much Efficiency By E. J. Rath

BEGIN HERE TODAY

JOHN W. BROOKE, widower and hardware magnate, leaves the city after arranging with a firm of efficiency engineers to operate his home. This without the knowledge of his three grown children, Constance, Billy and Alice. It isn't until

H. HEDGE, efficiency engineer, assumes control of the Brooke household, that they realize the full significance of the stringent situation that their father has wished upon them. Constance, feeling that marriage to a man who adores her but whom she does not love, is better than another six weeks in the same house with Hedge, decides to elope.

She is stealing down the back stairs on New Year's morning when she trips and falls into the arms of Hedge. When she recovers her breath sufficiently she orders him to let her go.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

"NOT until you let me go," answered the efficiency man. "And then maybe—"

With a little cry of dismay she disengaged her arms from his neck. "Let me go!" she repeated. "Temporarily or permanently?" he asked with great deliberation.

"Both!"

H. Hedge shook his head sadly. "I never could do two things at once," he said. "It's unscientific even to try."

"In that case, temporarily," he declared, as he reluctantly withdrew the arm that held her close.

Constance's cheeks were fiery; she prayed that the gloom of the back stairs rendered all colors neutral. "Thank you—for catching me," Out in the courtyard stood a roadster, the engine idling wheezily. Tommy Treadwell was standing beside it, nervously tapping on a fender. His eyes lighted with happiness as he sighted the furred figure of Constance and he sprang forward to assist with the grip.

"You dear old brick," he cried. "Morning, Tommy," said Constance.

Tommy had seized the grip and swung it up on the baggage carrier in the rear, where he began an adjustment of the straps. Meantime, Constance stepped in and settled herself nervously in one of the bucket seats.

The efficiency man arrived in the courtyard while Tommy was still working at the grip. As Constance sighted him, she observed with a sinking heart that he was clothed in one of his famous calms.

"Good morning," he said, as he walked across the open space.

Constance paled slightly and did not answer. Tommy Treadwell fumbled furiously at a strap and said nothing.

Hedge reached the side of the car, leaned over, pressed a button on the dash and turned off the ignition. The engine stopped.

"You let that car alone!" called Tommy angrily.

"All right; I will," said the efficiency man, stepping back a pace and eyeing Constance.

Tommy finished with the grip and came around to the side of the car.

"Well?" asked Hedge.

"Well?" echoed Tommy.

"What's the idea?"

The efficiency man exchanged swift glances and Tommy became emboldened.

"Well, if it'll give you any satisfaction to know," he announced, "Constance and I are going to be married."

"You surprise me," said the efficiency man. "I thought we had concluded that matter last night."

"You thought wrong. It's all settled."

"True; it's settled. Miss Brooke is not going to marry you."

Tommy flashed a dull red and there was a fighting look in his eye.

"Are you, Miss Brooke?" asked Hedge.

Constance compressed her lips and nodded.

"Which shows how error will permit itself," said the efficiency man, apparently talking to himself.

He stepped around to the rear of the car, unlocked a strap with a deft motion, and swung Constance's grip to the pavement.

"You may as well alight, Miss Brooke," he said.

Tommy Treadwell sprang forward and confronted him across the grip.

"You'd better keep out of this," he said grimly.

Tommy was quite a large young man, fully as large as Billy Brooke. He was taller than the efficiency man, and wider. But H. Hedge did not appear to be observant of Tommy's bulk just at that instant. He was looking only at his eyes.

"I can't keep out of it," he said simply. "It happens to be my duty to stay in it. Go in the house, Miss Brooke."

Constance remained immovable in her seat and maintained silence. "You're the one that's going in the house," he said.

"Furthermore," added H. Hedge, as he side-stepped a fresh volley, "when you use the straight blow, you start it too low and too far back. You are prodigious with muscular effort, for which you do not obtain sufficient return, save in the form of exercise. Observe again. You should not start an uppercut from the ground; it takes too long. Don't start it below the waist."

Tommy, breathing now in gasps, charged again.

"Your fancy work is bad," continued the efficiency man. "You travel a great distance, but you do not arrive. I don't wish to be rude, but it is my duty to say that you are clumsy. You are mastodonie. It is true; but the mastodon is an extinct animal. Why be extinct?"

Tommy was missing more obviously than ever. He was tired.

"Now, if I can, let me illustrate an efficient blow," said H. Hedge. "The truly efficient blow is conceived with deliberate purpose and executed with due economy. It travels the shortest possible distance and, theoretically, carries with it the exact amount of necessary power. It may be delivered with either hand. In this case, we will assume that it is to be delivered with the left. Thus:"

The quick eye of Constance Brooke noted a fleeting and surprising change in the face of the efficiency man. It had been impassive until now. But as he said "thus," his jaw tightened, and his forehead contracted in a scowl that frightened her.

His fist came from nowhere, but it landed somewhere, and his body was following it. Tommy Treadwell, already wabbling from his own efforts, turned half-way around, staggered, and fell flat on his face.

Constance uttered a cry and covered her eyes.

For an instant Tommy groped at the pavement; then began to arise, uncertainly.

"Don't make me do it again," said the efficiency man in a changed voice. "You haven't a chance."

Tommy, however, was not satisfied. He wheeled as he reached an erect position and closed in. So H. Hedge, again with the sudden scowl on his face, did it once more.

This time Tommy was no longer arising, and when he did it was to sit on the running-board of the car and rest his head in his hands.

"Now, if you please, Miss Brooke," said Hedge quietly, as he picked up her grip.

Constance, still averting her eyes, suddenly sprang from the car and dashed into the house, where she ran madly upstairs, half choked with hysterical sobs. The efficiency man looked at the crest-fallen knight on the running-board and shook his head slowly.

"Sorry if I hurt you, old man," he said. "But, really, you mustn't try to marry Miss Brooke."

Then he, too, disappeared into the house.

Money Order Finally Reached Destination

Washington, Nov. 21—(AP)—After ten years of roving, an international money order for $100 has finally reached its destination.

The postoffice department told the story today of the purchase of the money order in July 1915 by Moisley Pus, a Russian citizen living at Endicott, N. Y. It was made payable to his family at Merwa, Russia, but before it reached there Russia had been swept by revolution and the government had withdrawn the entire population from Merwa to safer quarters.

Losing track of the Pus family, a year later the Russian authorities returned the money order to this country and the postmaster at Endicott was instructed to refund it to the sender. Meanwhile he had disappeared and the order was returned to the postoffice department.

Last month, the Polish government wrote the department that Moisley Pus had complained his money order never had been delivered. It was him entirely. Perhaps it was a case of Providence, or perhaps it was because he flurried his head a few inches to the right, accidentally. In any event, it missed him clean, and Tommy fell over the grip.

He arose, chagrined and mad clear through. This time he came in swinging. Just what the efficiency man did it is difficult to say, for he did not appear to be doing anything, except falling to get hit. He had his hands up, but he was not using them on Tommy. He was dodging punches, stopping punches, diverting punches, but he was contenting himself with that. His face wore a thoughtful look. He was not giving ground, but at the same time he seemed to be engaged in a purely negative way.

It went thus for some minutes, and finally the efficiency man began to speak.

"I do not know," he said, as a left swing passed over his head, "where you studied the art of boxing. But there is no doubt that you waste a tremendous amount of effort. You do not box efficiently. In the first place, you should not swing at all. It causes the fist to travel in an arc, rather than in the shortest way. Observe—you missed me again."

Tommy, indeed, had, and nearly lost his balance.

"Furthermore," added H. Hedge, as he side-stepped a fresh volley, "when you use the straight blow, you start it too low and too far back. You are prodigious with muscular effort, for which you do not obtain sufficient return, save in the form of exercise. Observe again. Stomach Distress

JOHN L. BARRETT

Bedford, Ind.—"Several years ago I had a very bad stomach trouble—couldn't eat anything without distress. I doctored with different doctors and they did me no good at all. I was weak and could not work; at last I decided to try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Pleasant Pellets. Now I can eat anything I want and never have any distress in my stomach. I can't begin to tell the good these medicines have done me and I wish those who have stomach trouble and can't eat everything they want would try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and the Pleasant Pellets. I truly believe these remedies saved my life."

Miss Mable Portner is spending a few days this week with her sister Mrs. Henry Schaeffer.

Good Thoughts for Good People

Walk in the Spirit, and ye shall not fulfill the lust of the flesh. For the flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the flesh; and these are contrary the one to the other; so that ye cannot do the things that ye would. But if ye be led of the Spirit, ye are not under the law. The fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance; against such there is no law.

He that can apprehend and consider vice with all her baits and seeming pleasures, and yet abstain, and yet distinguish, and yet prefer that which is truly better; he is the true way-faring Christian.

No power on earth or under the earth, can make a man do wrong without his own consent.

Everything that exceeds the bounds of moderation has an unstable foundation.

God is better served in resisting a temptation to evil than in many formal prayers.

Hanny day, when, all appetites controlled, all passions subdued, all matter subjugated. Mind—all-conquering mind—shall live and move, the monarch of the world!

Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil.

The Bible is full of admonitions to Meeting Competition by Efficiency

An industrial organization can meet competition in only one way which is fair, equitable and of positive value to the consumer of its products.

The way lies in the development of superior efficiency. This procedure is followed by the Standard Oil Company (Indiana).

Economies in production and marketing constitute the best ammunition with which to meet competition. Such economies are possible only through efficiency.

Skill in manufacturing, skill in management, together with the conservation of effort and material, enable the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) to render its customers a maximum of service through reliable deliveries and high quality products at reasonable prices.

Skill in manufacturing and skill in management are based upon trained intelligence, functioning through organization.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) puts trained men on its tank wagons; at its service stations, as well as in its refineries and laboratories.

The Management stresses the value of integrity and adheres to the strictest principles of honor in all business dealings.

It appreciates the importance of high mental capacity. It realizes that, in its points of contact with the public, this intelligence insures the service it is striving to render. For example, a careless or inefficient agent may cause the Company losses which the executive department cannot save.

Only integrity and intelligence throughout the organization can effect the sound economies which minimize avoidable mistakes, lost time, lost effort and lost customers.

These economies in operating this Company's business, are passed on to the consumer in low prices.

The next time you drive into a service station of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) please reflect that it is there for your convenience. It is merely the tangible expression of the Company's effort to serve you efficiently.

FRENCH BUSINESS MEN ASK BANISHMENT OF GOVERNMENT TELEPHONES

The Chamber of Commerce of Paris and the French Chambers of Commerce, which represents 140 business organizations, have adopted resolutions urging the French government to transfer the government-owned telephone system of France to private enterprise. Press associations declare that this movement in favor of private ownership has found support among trade associations throughout France.

The reasons given for the proposed change are that the government in dealing with its employees and in its relation with the public has failed to attain the standard set by enterprise under private management.
